FAST trains on the Santa Fe, [illegible] Pacific and Union Pacific [illegible] from Chicago to the Pacific [illegible] 63 hours, saving the greater [illegible] a business day at the western [illegible]

[illegible] time takes you by daylight [illegible] hundreds of miles of territory [illegible] unseen at night. That's more [illegible] than the time saving.

[illegible] Fe's fast train, "The Chief," [illegible] this is written, under the new [illegible] shows the wonders of Arizona [illegible]light. The wise traveler will cross [illegible] by one road and return [illegible]. Tickets can be made to [illegible] way.

WHAT do one hundred and fourteen [illegible] American people know [illegible] Arizona, one of the most mag[illegible] of the 48 states? Part of Ari[illegible] 150 feet and part of it 13,000 [illegible] above sea level. It includes every [illegible] climate except tropical humidity. From the car window you get the [illegible] of seeing America first. You [illegible] peaks that were once the [illegible] cones of volcanoes. The latest [illegible] of American cars run beside the [illegible] with the ruins of the oldest pre[illegible] monuments in American for a [illegible]ground. You pass gold and silver [illegible] quarries of onyx and marble. [illegible] Flagstaff you see piles of lumber that tell how eagerly big forests [illegible] being changed into dollars.

THE motto of Arizona is: "God en[illegible]." A better one could not [illegible] chosen.

There is wealth enough in this state [illegible] and undeveloped to pay all the [illegible] and all the war squanderings of [illegible] nations, amounting to hundreds [illegible] of dollars.

[illegible] are health and peace on these [illegible] for all the suffering of the [illegible] and opportunity for all the energy [illegible] ambition pent up in great eastern [illegible]. It is the land of wonders as [illegible] the land of wealth. It has the [illegible] ruins, Indian pueblos, paint[illegible] desert, petrified forest and—what [illegible] other state or nation can claim—[illegible] world's greatest wonder, the Grand [illegible]. Look one mile down into that [illegible] and you will think thereafter [illegible] world of larger dimensions.

Search For Two Men Lost Enroute Here

RESIDENTS OF GARY, IND., FAIL TO REACH CITY

Started to Marion Thursday Morning To Attend Funeral at Edison

POLICE AID IN HUNT

Brother of Mrs. Glen Thomas, Orchard-St, and Former Edison Man Missing

Police in cities and towns between Marion and Gary, Ind., have been pressed into service in a search for John Swam, 32, and Fred Colopy, 36, Gary, formerly of Edison, who left their home early Thursday in a Chevrolet sedan to drive to Edison to attend the funeral of the latter's father, William Colopy.

The funeral was held this afternoon with short services at the home in Edison followed by brief rites at the Edison M. E. Church in charge of Rev. Riggs.

Immediately after the funeral relatives started out in search of the missing men, following the route between Marion and Gary.

Early today H. O. Swam, brother of John Swam, and Glen Thomas, Orchard-st, brother-in-law of Fred Colopy, and another relative from Pennsylvania, started out in an automobile to check reports of accidents along the route, which the two missing men intended taking in the drive to Edison.

According to Mrs. Glen Thomas, sister of one of the missing men, the two men left Gary Thursday morning at 7:30 o'clock, expecting to reach Marion Thursday night.

When they failed to put in an appearance here yesterday relatives became alarmed and wired other relatives in Gary. From them they learned that the two men had started to Marion early Thursday morning.

After hours of waiting relatives last night enlisted the services of police departments in all cities and towns along the route.

Up until a late hour this afternoon no word had been received of the missing men or from those who started in search of them early today.

Belief was expressed this afternoon by Mrs. Thomas that her brother and his companion either figured in a serious automobile crash or were the victims of holdup men.

RICHWOOD DETOUR TO BE USED BY AUTOISTS

Pavement Is Complete, Engineer States; Bridge Work Starts Monday

Thanksgiving traffic will be forced to use the detour through Richwood on the Marysville-rd. The pavement is finished and ready for traffic, but the bridge one mile south of the beginning of the detour can not be used.

Pouring of concrete on the new bridge that is to span the creek crossing the road at that point will start Monday, and this concrete must set for 21 days. This will carry the opening of the road up into December.

Division Engineer J. W. Snyder said today that the detour through Richwood is in good shape and motorists will have no trouble if they travel south from Marion for the next few weeks.

RED CROSS TO LAUNCH FINAL DRIVE SUNDAY

Effort Will Be Made To Raise $7500 in House-to-House Canvass

OTHER CAMPAIGNS FAIL

Returns from Business District and Factories Fall Far Below Quota

A final drive will be made by the Marion County Chapter, Red Cross, tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in an effort to raise the $7,500 necessary to bring the Tenth Annual Roll Call fund up to $10,000 quota set early this year by the budget committee.

The obvious failure of the business section drive and the campaign among the factories of the city has placed the success or failure of the chapter's annual roll call in the hands of the individual citizens, officials said today.

Estimating that the business section and the factories would contribute close to $5,000 the executive committee was relying on the house-to-house canvass to be staged tomorrow to bring in about $5,000. The present status of affairs however, makes it necessary for the citizens to contribute approximately $7,500 to make the drive a success.

In view of the situation which now confronts the local organization Clifford B. Stoll, general roll call chairman, and Mrs. George B. Geran, acting chairman, today made a statement pertinent to the charity cares of Marion.

No Curtailment

According to Mr. Stoll and Mrs. Geran, the local organization of Red Cross will not, in case of failure of the drive, curtail its activities in an effort to make the smaller sum last out the entire year.

Instead, it is understood that Marion County Chapter will carry on all of its numerous activities as long as the funds will permit.

The standing of the organization and the number of persons, families, ex-soldiers and sailors necessitates that it carry on fully or not at all. That half

SENATE TO INVESTIGATE LATIN-AMERICAN POLICY

Senator Norris, Republican, Backs Plan of Wheeler for Probe

Washington, Nov. 20—A senate investigation into certain phases of the administration's Latin-American policy will be demanded as soon as congress meets.

This became definitely known today as senatorial muttering increased in volume over the latest development—the establishment of a virtual American protectorate in Nacaragua.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, is preparing a resolution to introduce calling for the immediate withdrawal of American marines and warships from Nicaraguan waters, forces which Secretary of State Kellogg has indicated are to be maintained there indefinitely.

Non-partisan support of Wheeler's move was forthcoming today in the form of a statement from Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska that "it is time the American people know the truth of what is going on down there."

"It is the time to take off the mask of secrecy surrounding our diplomatic relations with Latin-America, particularly Nicaragua," said the Nebraskan.

NATHAN LEOPOLD TAKEN TO COURT AS WITNESS

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 20—Nathan Leopold slayer of Bobby Franks, was taken to the courthouse from the penitentiary today to appear as a "reluctant" witness in the defense of six convicts on trial for slaying Deputy Warden Peter Klein.

Handcuffed to two other convicts who will also be witnesses, Leopold was driven from the prison in an automobile.

STEVENS DENIES COMPLICITY IN MURDER OF PAIR

Brother of Mrs. Hall Declares He Was Not in De Russey's Lane That Night

WAS FISHING, ALIBI

Henry Testifies He Had Not Fired Revolver in 25 Years

Courthouse, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 20—Henry Stevens, one of the three defendants accused of murder of Rev. Edward W. Hall and Eleanor Mills, denied on the witness stand today, while testifying in his own behalf, that he "directly or indirectly" participated in the double murder.

He asserted he was not in De Russey's lane on the night of the crime, Sept. 14, 1922.

His alibi was that he was fishing at his home in Lavalette, 58 miles away at the approximate time of the murder. He said he stayed in his home in Lavalette, that night, and that he didn't leave it until he was summoned by a telegram from a relative notifying him of the death of Reverend Hall.

Stevens, a ruddy-faced, outdoors man and a "crack shot" with a rifle, testified he had not fired a revolver for 25 years. It was a 32 caliber automatic that was used in the killing.

Is Full Brother

The witness talked in an assured manner and was self-possessed on the stand. His direct examination had taken one hour and 18 minutes. He was then taken over by Prosecutor Alexander Simpson for cross-examination.

Cross-examining Henry Stevens, the prosecutor asked him if Willie Stevens

Record Drop in Temperature for Season Is Forecast for Tonight

More snow and continued colder is the weather prediction for tonight and tomorrow. Up until noon today the temperature had not gone above freezing point, and tonight with the usual lowering of the temperature, the lowest point reached so far by the mercury is looked for.

The temperature went one degree lower last night than the night before. Thursday night the low mark was 28 degrees, and lats night it was 27 degrees. The high mark yesterday was 47 degrees. A year ago yesterday the high point was 49 and the low was 35 degrees.

The cold wave is general throughout the north, and most of the football games today were to be played on frozen fields, and in some cases on fields where the snow had fallen deep enough to be swept off.

CHILDREN'S HOME WORK AWARDED PROBST BROS.

Contract for Improvements Let by Commissioners at Bid of $1,269

Contract for the new pump and the plumbing improvements at the Marion County Children's Home was awarded this morning by the county commissioners at the regular meeting of the board.

The contract was given to Probst Brothers, on their bid of $1,269. One other bid, that of James J. Peacock, for $1,297, was received. Peacock also submitted an alternate bid for more expensive equipment on the pump, which was larger than the estimate of the job.

The work is to be completed before the end of this year, and will probably start at once. The new pump will increase the water supply at the Children's Home and will be an aid to the fire equipment. The plumbing changes include alterations in the toilet facilities and other improvements.

TROOPS CONTINUE TO PURSUE COMMUNISTS

Batavia, Nov. 20 — Government troops continue to pursue communists who are alleged to have been responsible for the recent attempt at revolt.

In South Bantam, the fleeing rioters clashed with the troops and three were killed. Many arrests were made.

The arrested leaders of the revolt are being banished to New Guinea.

"KING BEN" AGED BY LONG PURSUIT

"King" Benjamin Purnell of the House of David, seized by Michigan state police at the cult's colony, Benton Harbor, following a three-year search, has aged considerably. Group picture shows him now as he faces charges preferred by two former girl members of his colony; below, as he appeared prior to his flight. Group picture, left to right, front row: Deputy Under Sheriff Frank Pagel, who took part in the raid; "King" Benjamin Purnell and James Walker, a disciple. Back row: Mrs. Mary Benjamin Purnell, known as "Queen Mary," and Cora Mooney, disciple.

The "King's" followers, after his release on bail, declared they were confident he would be proved innocent of all charges against him.

It was in 1922 that two young girls, Mrs. Ruth Bamford Reed and Mrs. Gladys Bamford Rubel, sisters, left the House of David colony, charging immoralities by Purnell. This started the investigation which resulted in the indictments returned against Purnell, who now awaits arraignment on charges of bigamy and criminal assault.

Formerly a vigorous man, the "King" now is feeble and is supported by the faithful when he walks.

Aged Contract Baring How Vanderbilt Bartered American Gold for British Title for Daughter Consuelo Found

Formal Document Reveals That Men Were Mutually Distrustful of One Another

Riverhead, N. Y., Nov. 20—The 31-year-old contract by which William Kissam Vanderbilt bartered his Yankee gold for a British ducal title for his 17-year-old daughter, Consuelo, was revealed today.

The contract, a voluminous indenture between the "Most Noble Charles Richard John, Duke of Marlborough, party of the first part, and William Kissam Vanderbilt, Esq., party of the second part," was found in the musty file of an obscure courthouse here.

It was formal, as cautious and safeguarding throughout its lengthy provisions as though the able financer was transferring a valuable piece of real estate or a valuable block of railroad bonds instead of conveying a beautiful heiress into the nobility.

Reveals Bargaining

The hitherto unpublished document revealed the shrewd bargaining by which the Duke of Marlborough shared his title with Consuelo Vanderbilt after having wrung concession after concession from her wealthy father. It also disclosed that the duke and William K. Vanderbilt were mutually distrustful of one another.

The discovery of the marriage contract comes on the heels of the recent annulment of the marriage by the tribunal of the rota at Rome.

By the terms of the contract, Vanderbilt settled outright on the Duke of Marlborough the proceeds of a trust fund of $2,500,000. From this fund,

DILLON, SHERWIN NAMED IN $15,000,000 ACTION

Suit Brought Against Financier and Banker by Nine Goodyear Stockholders

Akron, Nov. 20—Clarence Dillon, New York financier, and John Sherwin, Cleveland banker, were named as defendants in a suit to recover $15,000,000 alleged losses of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., brought by nine Goodyear stockholders, which was on file here today.

Dillon and Sherwin are members of a committee of three which assumed control of the Goodyear concern during the refinancing operations in 1921 when the rubber market slumped and the company was in a precarious financial condition. Owen D. Young of New York, the third member of the committee, was not made a party to the suit.

The suit is the outgrowth of litigation instituted by a group of stockholders, which is already resulting in the filing of two other lawsuits, the object being the ousting of the present management.

The petition asserts that through alleged mismanagement, the two defendants caused the stockholders losses totalling the amount sought to be recovered and sets forth numerous specific instances of this alleged financial mismanagement. It is asserted the defendants personally made enormous profits.

SISTER OF WRIGHTS TO WED KANSAS CITY WRITER

Dayton, Nov. 20—License for the marriage of Henry J. Haskell, chief editorial writer of the Kansas City Star, and Miss Katherine Wright, sister of Orville and Wilbur Wright, has been issued in Montgomery County Probate Court, but plans for the ceremony are being kept secret, although it is believed the marriage will take place today in Oberlin, where the couple is attending the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Oberlin College.

Plans thus far divulged call for the marriage ceremony to be performed by Dr. H. C. King, president of Oberlin College.

DEFUNCT BANK CHAIN HEAD WAITS VERDICT

Charged With Fraudulent Insolvency in Collapse of 83 Money Institutions

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 20—The case of W. D. Manley, former president of the defunct Bankers Trust Co. chain, was in the hands of a jury today.

The jury took one ballot after it received the case early this morning and then went to bed, deciding to wait until later to consider the verdict.

Manley was tried on the first of 13 indictments against him, that of fraudulent insolvency. He was accused of being responsible for the collapse of the 83 chain banks in Florida and Georgia.

The banker pleaded insanity, but after a trial lasting more than a week, he was declared sane by a jury.

LITTLE CHANCE OF DROP IN PRICE OF COAL HERE

No Reduction in Sight, Inquiry Among Local Dealers Indicates

If retail coal prices drop within the next two or three months it will be a surprise to local dealers. A check of coal offices this morning brought almost a unanimous report that there was no change in prices in prospect immediately, and little chance of any downward revision this winter.

The report from Columbus that dealers there looked for a drop in retail prices were discounted by local dealers, who have the same connections as the Columbus coal men. There has been a drop in mine prices of a few cents a ton, local dealers say, but the cuts have been in mine run coal, and not in screened grades. Not a nickel has been knocked off the mine price of high grade domestic coals, they claim.

Price of Pocahontas

Pocahontas is now selling from $10.50 to $11, depending on the grade. West Virginia coal is now $9.50 and Kentucky coal is $9 a ton. These prices have held for a month and in all likelihood will continue for several months.

The supply of coal in cellars of Marion homes is not heavy, dealers say. They point out that if there had been heavy buying of coal for domestic use last summer, coal prices might be easier now. During the summer months coal sold as low as $7 a ton. Few persons stocked up on it then. With cellars full, coal men would not have stacks of orders coming in now, they say, and the price might be easier because of lessened demand. But with the present demand and the diversion of coal to England and South America there is little chance of a drop.

AKRON WOMAN IS DEAD AFTER FAMILY QUARREL

Akron, Nov. 20—Mrs. Ruth Ayres, 26, mother of five children, died in People's Hospital here this morning as the result of being clubbed during a family quarrel. Her husband, Edgar Ayres, 25, is being held.

Police declare that Ayres has admitted striking his wife on the head with a stick of firewood when the couple became embroiled in an early morning argument.

PUBLIC SERVICE OIL STATION IS AGAIN ROBBED

Looting Third Time in Two Years, Police Records Disclose

NITRO-GLYCERIN USED

$61.95 in Checks Not Disturbed Woman Living Near Plant Hears Explosion

Burglars entered the filling station of the Public Service Oil Corporation at the corner of Farming and N. Main-sts, last night, blew open the safe and escaped with $127.20.

It was the third time in two years that the place had been visited by yeggs. The first attack on the safe was unsuccessful, the burglars being frightened away before completing the job. The second visit, which occurred last May, yielded better results, the safe being opened and $35 taken.

Entrance to the filling station in last night's robbery was effected by prying open a window at the north of the building leading into a storage room. The safe was then carried from the main office into the storage room and blown open with a charge of nitroglycerine.

Skillfully Executed

The robbery was skillfully and carefully executed and in all of its details indicates that it was the work of professionals. The safe was evidently taken into the storage room so that there would be little danger of detection from persons on the street discovering the robbers' operations or from the explosion attracting attention of persons residing in the neighborhood.

The only clew regarding the probable time of the robbery was obtained from Mrs. James T. Oberlander, who resides in the first property north of the filling station. Mrs. Oberlander reports that she heard the sound of a muffled explosion about 11 o'clock last night and at the time thought it came from the furnace at her home. She gave the incident no further thought until news of the burglary reached her this morning.

The safecracking job was neatly executed, the force of the nitroglycerine blast being sufficient to open the door but not strong enough to detach it from the hinges.

Took Only Money

A check of the company's loss made this morning by the local manager, F. A. Schroeter, showed that the burglars took nothing but money and did not molest a number of checks, totalling $61.95, included in the contents.

The burglary was discovered shortly before 6 o'clock this morning by T. J. Horton, one of the filling station attendants, when he arrived to begin the day's business. He called the police department immediately and local officers then sent notices of the robbery to authorities in nearby cities. The police, however, are lacking any information which might lead to capture of the burglars, it was stated today.

Had the robbers been successful in the first of their three visits to the filling station two years ago they would have been rewarded with loot of substantial proportions, as the safe contained $600 at that time, employes of the oil company stated today.

The main office of the Public Service Oil Corporation at Columbus was notified of the robbery immediately and representatives arrived in the city a few hours later to assist police in the investigation.

NO SMOKING VOTED BY ANTIOCH GIRLS

Yellow Springs, Nov. 20—No smoking by Antioch College co-eds while in this little college town, in their Antioch League lodge at Dayton, or "anywhere else good taste forbids", is the decision of women attending college here.

The lassies voted 186 to 176 on the question, a count of the ballots today revealed.

MAN GIVES BOND, REARRESTED AS HE LEAVES JAIL

Short Freedom Allowed V. T. Simms, Charged with Bad Checks

Short freedom was allowed V. T. Simms yesterday. He was released from jail when he arranged for $500 bonds after pleading guilty to a charge of issuing a bad check and was immediately arrested again on another affidavit charging him with passing a second bad check.

Sims was taken before Justice M. O. Stoll again and pleaded guilty. He was bound over to the grand jury on a second charge under $500 bond which he was unable to furnish and went back to jail.

The first check charge was filed by C. C. Brown, on a check for $10. The second charge was filed by W. H. [illegible] on a check for $20.

These Twin-evils OUT!

—Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine, patented, exclusive, cleans the slate of all carbon troubles and valve grinding . . . while still another new and exclusive Great Six feature ensures permanent chassis silence and diminishes wear at every point of the car.

With valve-grinding forever eliminated and carbon troubles cured once and for all, Willys-Knight Great Six owners enjoy the enviable position that their upkeep cost is reduced by practically one-half and scores of thousands of extra miles are automatically added to the life and usefulness of their cars.

Carbon—that bugbear of all poppet-valve-engined cars—has no harmful effect whatever on the Willys-Knight Great Six. Nor does valve-grinding ever enter into consideration. For the patented and exclusive Willys-Knight engine, because of its unique sleeve-valve construction principle, gets rid of both . . .

In point of fact, the presence of carbon in a Willys-Knight is a helpful condition. It seals compression—prevents power waste. Instead of hindering the engine's efficiency and smoothness—and subjecting you to the periodic inconvenience and expense of removing it—carbon helps the Knight engine to perform.

"KING" PURNELL FIGHTING BACK FROM SICKBED

Takes Legal Action To Quash Civil Suits of Bamford Sisters

Benton Harbor, Mich., Nov. 20—"King" Benjamin Purnell today faced the threat of being hauled back to a cell in the county jail. Bondsmen who provided $120,000 bail for the head of the Israelite House of David following his arrest in a raid by state police, are considering turning him back to the court, Prosecutor George Bookwalter was told.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Nov. 20—"King" Benjamin Purnell, ruler of the House of David, fought back at his foes today.

From his bed in the strange colony where Prosecutor George Bookwalter insists he is faking illness, the self-styled "prophet," through his attorneys, filed legal papers to quash the civil suits of the Bamford sisters of Detroit.

The Bamford girls, former members of the Israelite cult, are suing the bewhiskered cult leader for $200,000 each. They will also appear against Purnell with Mrs. Bessie Woodworth, whose tip led to the chieftain's arrest.

"We've got these Bamford civil suits licked before they start," W. J. Barnard, Purnell's attorney, said today.

"The capiases as continued from time to time by the Band of [illegible] Walter Nelson, of Detroit, are absolutely illegal [illegible] Nelson failed to perpetuate them through proper [illegible]

"Lives To Match"

PLENTY

The incident on which the national idea of Thanksgiving is based applies similarly to every man and woman. With the Pilgrims, the day marked the fruitation of the labor and thrift which had ensued from spring and summer planting and growing seasons. In the autumn of life, each of us reaps and enjoys the fruits of our "spring" and "summer" IF we have been thrifty! Let us explain our Building and Loan Plan today!

Announcing Two New DeLuxe Types

—— unparalleled in elegance and luxury

Continuing its many triumphs of 1926, Oakland announces two superbly smart body types—the DeLuxe Coupe and the DeLuxe Landau Sedan on the famous Pontiac Six Chassis.

These were developed to meet the insistent demand for an inexpensive six-cylinder car, combining unusual power, speed and stamina with a rare degree of distinctive beauty and elegance.

Fenders as well as body, hood, lamps and top in modish Peter Pan Blue Duco. Artillery wheels in natural wood—special luxurious mohair upholstery—body hardware of period design—garnish rails and steering wheels of rich American walnut—nickeled radiator—bumpers and rear vision mirror—such are the more important touches of distinction which lift the new Pontiac Sixes to the very forefront of the most fashionable creation of the day.

You will find these new Pontiac Six DeLuxe Types well worth a special visit to our showrooms. Prices only slightly higher than standard types—DeLuxe Coupe, $895; DeLuxe Landau Sedan, $975.

Pontiac Six, $825 to $975. Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six, $1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

Stick of Cord-Wood Tossed in Crotch of Tree 85 Years Ago Released When Forest Giant Topples in High Wind

T[illegible] stately trees in the [illegible] of periods of civilization [illegible] some of the most [illegible] possessing a more [illegible] have found in [illegible] products of nature [illegible] for imperishable [illegible]

[illegible] about towering [illegible] in this and other [illegible] Longfellow immortalized [illegible] spreading chestnut tree" [illegible] close to the blacksmith [illegible] toiled day in and day [illegible] his roaring forge in the [illegible] New England town.

[illegible] have the story of an interesting tree in Marion County, [illegible] important as poetry and [illegible] relating to some of the [illegible] monarchs of the forest, [illegible] but nevertheless [illegible] unusual to make it [illegible]

[illegible] grew in what is known [illegible]mpson's Woods", a 100-[illegible] of timber-land located in [illegible] Township between the villages of Morral and Meeker. For more than a century it stood strong and unyielding in the midst of storm and gale until a few months ago, weakened by age and many years of buffeting, it crashed to earth, where it now lies, a broken remnant of its former majesty.

Discovery that the ancient tree, a white oak, had finally fallen before the elements, was made this week by a party of hunters who knew its history and who found its shattered remains on the ground while passing through the woods.

Destruction of the giant white oak has brought to light an interesting feature of its history.

Eighty-five years ago Thomas A. Thompson, a pioneer resident of Marion County and father of Hayes Thompson, local attorney, tossed a four-foot stick of cord-wood into the forks of the tree while he was passing through the forest on his way to school. He was then a boy about nine years of age.

As years passed by, the forks of the oak grew together and closed over the piece of wood. There it remained until the tree fell recently before the onslaught of the storm. As it crashed to earth the oak split asunder at the forks, releasing the [illegible] of cordwood from the place where the schoolboy had tossed it 85 years before. It was found to be in a perfect state of preservation, only the end that had been exposed to the weather having rotted away.

The boy who figured in this interesting incident lived to become one of Marion County's oldest and best-known citizens, passing away at the Thompson homestead at the corner of Oak and Center sts on Oct. 5, 1906.

The 108-acre tract of forest in which the giant white oak grew has a story of unusual interest. It is a part of one of the few farms in Marion County that still remain in possession of the families to which original grants were made by the government more than a century ago. The Thompson family, one of the oldest in this section of Ohio, still retains ownership of a large acreage in Salt Rock Township obtained by the Thompson pioneers through federal land grants.

The first of the family to settle in this locality was John M. C. Thompson, father of Thomas A., the boy who figures in the story of the white oak tree. This early pioneer settled in the section now known as Salt Rock Township in 1819 and took up his first land, which included the wooded area between Meeker and Morral, in 1820.

Indians were then numerous in this part of Ohio, a large settlement being located at the present site of Upper Sandusky. They journeyed often to the Thompson farm-home, that being the only place for miles around from where they could obtain lard and other cooking supplies.

Up until 1920 the Thompson Woods was the largest and most valuable acreage of standing timber in Marion County. In that year, the owners, descendants of the pioneer settler, John M. C. Thompson, sold 200 of the best trees in the forest to the J. C. Kitchen Lumber Co. of Columbus, Ind. The trees, all towering specimens and mostly white oak, brought an average price of $95 or a total of $19,000 for the 200.

The forest is still one of the largest in this section of the state but has comparatively few trees left which compare in value with those sold to the Indiana company.

Thomas A. Thompson lived on the farm in Salt Rock Township until 1884 when he purchased the home at the corner of Oak and Center sts where the family has since resided. This dwelling house, one of Marion's historical structures, was built in 1839 by Dr. T. B. [illegible]. It was owned by the Seffner and Hane families prior to purchase by the Thompson family.

Mr. Thompson died in 1906 at the age of 76, just 20 years before the big oak tree was destroyed by the storm which released the relic of his boyhood days.

QUEEN RETURNS TO NEW YORK TIRED WOMAN

Vivacity That Was Marie's on Start of Tour Greatly Diminished

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train, in West Virginia, enroute to New York, Nov. 20—Queen Marie of Roumania, who started out so gaily a month ago for her tour of America, returns to New York today a tried and worried woman.

The 10,000 mile trans-continental trip with its internal bickerings not entirely subsided, the reported illness of King Ferdinand, the collapse of Princess Ileana through over-exertion, and the strenuous program of banquets and receptions have taken their toll.

Dark circles underline the eyes of her majesty and the vivacity for which she is famous is diminished.

The royal train arrives in Jersey City about 4:35 o'clock this afternoon. Her majesty immediately will motor to Tuxedo, N. Y., where she will rest at the home of Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, until she sails on the liner Berengaria Nov. 24 for home.

Farewell Dinner Given

Queen Marie admitted today that she had received no official request from her government to return home. She stated through the observation car spokesman that conflicting reports of King Ferdinand's health had made her decide to sail as soon as possible.

Her majesty received a cable from Queen Marie of Jugo Slavia, her daughter, today, which read:

"Papa better. Don't be anxious."

A farewell dinner was given Queen Marie in the dining car last night.

"I wish to thank you for a very happy journey," said her majesty to Col. John H. Carroll, official host to the queen.

"This train has become like a home to us. Our hearts are sad tonight at the thought of leaving America."

Among the guests was Judge Robert W. Bingham, publisher of the Courier Journal and Times, of Louisville Ky.

Presents Gifts

Her majesty distributed pictures of herself and presented Colonel Carroll with a gold watch and Maj. Stanley Washburn, her aide, with a cigaret case. Col. Walter V. Shipley also received a cigaret case.

The condition of Princess Ileana is reported to be progressing favorably, but she will remain in bed until she arrives in New York.

The royal party set out by motor today for Martinsburg, W. Va., for a tour through the historic Shenandoah Valley, passing through the towns of Winchester and Charleston, the sites where General Sheridan began his ride and where John Brown, of Civil War fame, was hanged.

The party met the special train at Harpers Ferry.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, together with Mrs Willard, will meet the train at Baltimore.

REPORT ILLNESS HAS TAKEN SERIOUS TURN

Bucharest, —While official statements continue to declare that the condition of King Ferdinand is not serious, reports were current today that the king's illness has taken a more serious turn.

A French specialist who has been in attendance upon the king and who had departed for Paris, is reported to have been recalled by telegraph.

The queen of Jugo-Slavia, daughter of the king, who had planned to return to Belgrade today, has cancelled her plans and will remain with her father.

The court is anxiously awaiting the return of Queen Marie from the United States.

PRIZE BEAUTY OF FRANCE NOW WEARS DOG COLLAR

Paris, Nov. 20.—France's most beautiful [illegible] 1926, Mademoiselle Jacqueline Shelly, has just started the fashion of wearing a dog collar about her pretty throat. It is made of fine leather, lined with velvet and studded with nails of gold, silver or precious stones.

Many of the smartest Parisiennes have taken up the fad. Most of them are the little black and white bands which stick out just as on an honest-to-goodness bulldog's neckpiece.

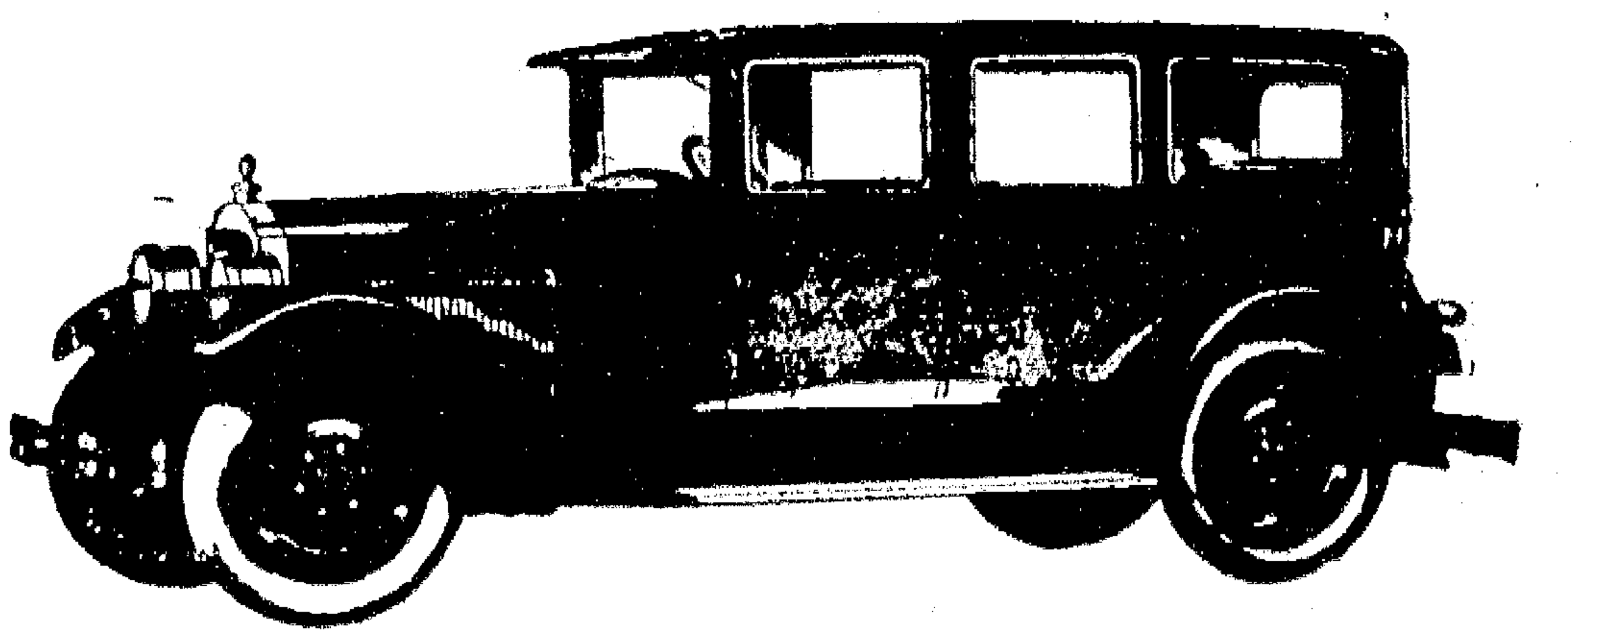
The Packard Six seven-passenger sedan-limousine is ideally beautiful and distinguished. Here is the supreme combination of all that is fine in motor cars.



The Long-Lived Packard Six Has Doubled The Fine Car Market

PACKARD has made it possible for more than twice as many people to own really fine cars.

Packard has achieved this remarkable public benefit not by lowering standards and cutting prices but by raising standards—building far finer cars than it has ever been possible to build before—and through engineering improvements making these new and improved cars last twice as long in service.

So Packard owners need face no "used car problem". They are learning that they can themselves use all of the long mileage life Packard sells them—and do it comfortably and enjoyably in cars which never even look out of date, no matter how long they are continued in use.

For Packard has long protected its owners' interests. No radical changes in appearance are made from year to year. And when, as in recent months, improvements in motor design add greatly improved performance, a large measure of this increased power is made available to recent purchasers at low cost—in this instance by a new head quickly applied to the older motors.

Naturally Packard sales have tremendously increased. The finest cars Packard has ever built are today far lower in first cost, in cost per mile of operation, and in maintenance cost than any Packard ever was before.

If you really desire Packard ownership but feel you cannot afford so fine a car, come in and see us before buying a compromise. We can prove to you that you can afford to own and drive the car you want.

The Packard Six five-passenger sedan is but $______ delivered at your door. And the Packard payment plan makes purchase surprisingly easy. May we explain it to you?

PENNSYLVANIA PLANNING PARTY ON CHRISTMAS

Employes and Families To Take Part Night of Dec. 23

Pennsylvania Railroad employes and their families over the entire system will stage the biggest Christmas party ever held on the railroad on the night of Thursday, Dec. 23, according to plans now under way in the larger cities on the Pennsylvania lines.

Festivities are centering at division points and definite plans have already been laid in the Western Region for Christmas celebrations at Chicago, Columbus, Indianapolis, Ft. Wayne and Terre Haute. Others will be announced later.

Marion employes of the Pennsy may journey to Columbus to attend the celebration in case no plans are completed for festivities in this city or a city nearer than Columbus.

Christmas parties have been a part of the Pennsylvania employes' social affairs for many years, but no attempt was ever made to co-ordinate them until last year.

President Atterbury of the Pennsy was so impressed with the spirit displayed last year that he expressed the desire to see still greater number of employes given the opportunity to gather at Christmas time for a Pennsylvania Yuletide festival.

In the Western Region, of which Marion is a part, Vice President T. B. Hamilton has already sent out letters heartily endorsing the Christmas parties for this year. Regional officers and division officials are co-operating in perfecting plans for the celebration.

The series of Christmas celebrations being planned is expected to give an opportunity to celebrate the Christmas season to the greatest Pennsy family gathering ever met together at one time.

Auto Commandments

Donald B. Clark, Thompson-st, a painter in Erie Yard A, of this city, has painted a poster entitled "Ten Commandments for Autoists." The poster has gained prominence among local officers and was published in the Erie Magazine this month. The auto commandments include the following:

Thou shalt learn to recognize railroad crossings and to approach them with care.

Thou shalt look both ways and listen for trains.

Thou shalt honor thy crossing watchman's signal.

Thou shalt keep thy brakes girdle with effective brake linings.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy railroad.

Thou shalt not try to beat a train.

Thou shalt at no time depend upon the driver in the car ahead.

Thou shalt not kill the passenger within thy car.

Thou shalt always use good judgment at all railroad crossings, that thy days may be long upon the earth and the enjoyment of thy car continues.

Thou shalt always "Cross Crossings Cautiously."

Office Changes

Changes in the railroad offices of T. J. Hayes at Bellefontaine, superintendent of the Cleveland and Indianapolis Division of the Big Four, have been started. The estimated cost of the improvements is $ 500.

Track Inspection"

The annual track inspection over the entire system of the Hocking Valley is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, according to announcement made today.

Supervisor F. A. Sparks of the Toledo Division will be a member of the inspection party which will make the run from Toledo to Athens Monday, and cover the River Division Tuesday, returning to Columbus before Tuesday night.

The inspection train will consist of at least 30 track supervisors, superintendents, trainmasters and other officials.

The inspection is made annually to check up on the amount of work performed on each division during the year and discover room for improvement during the coming year.

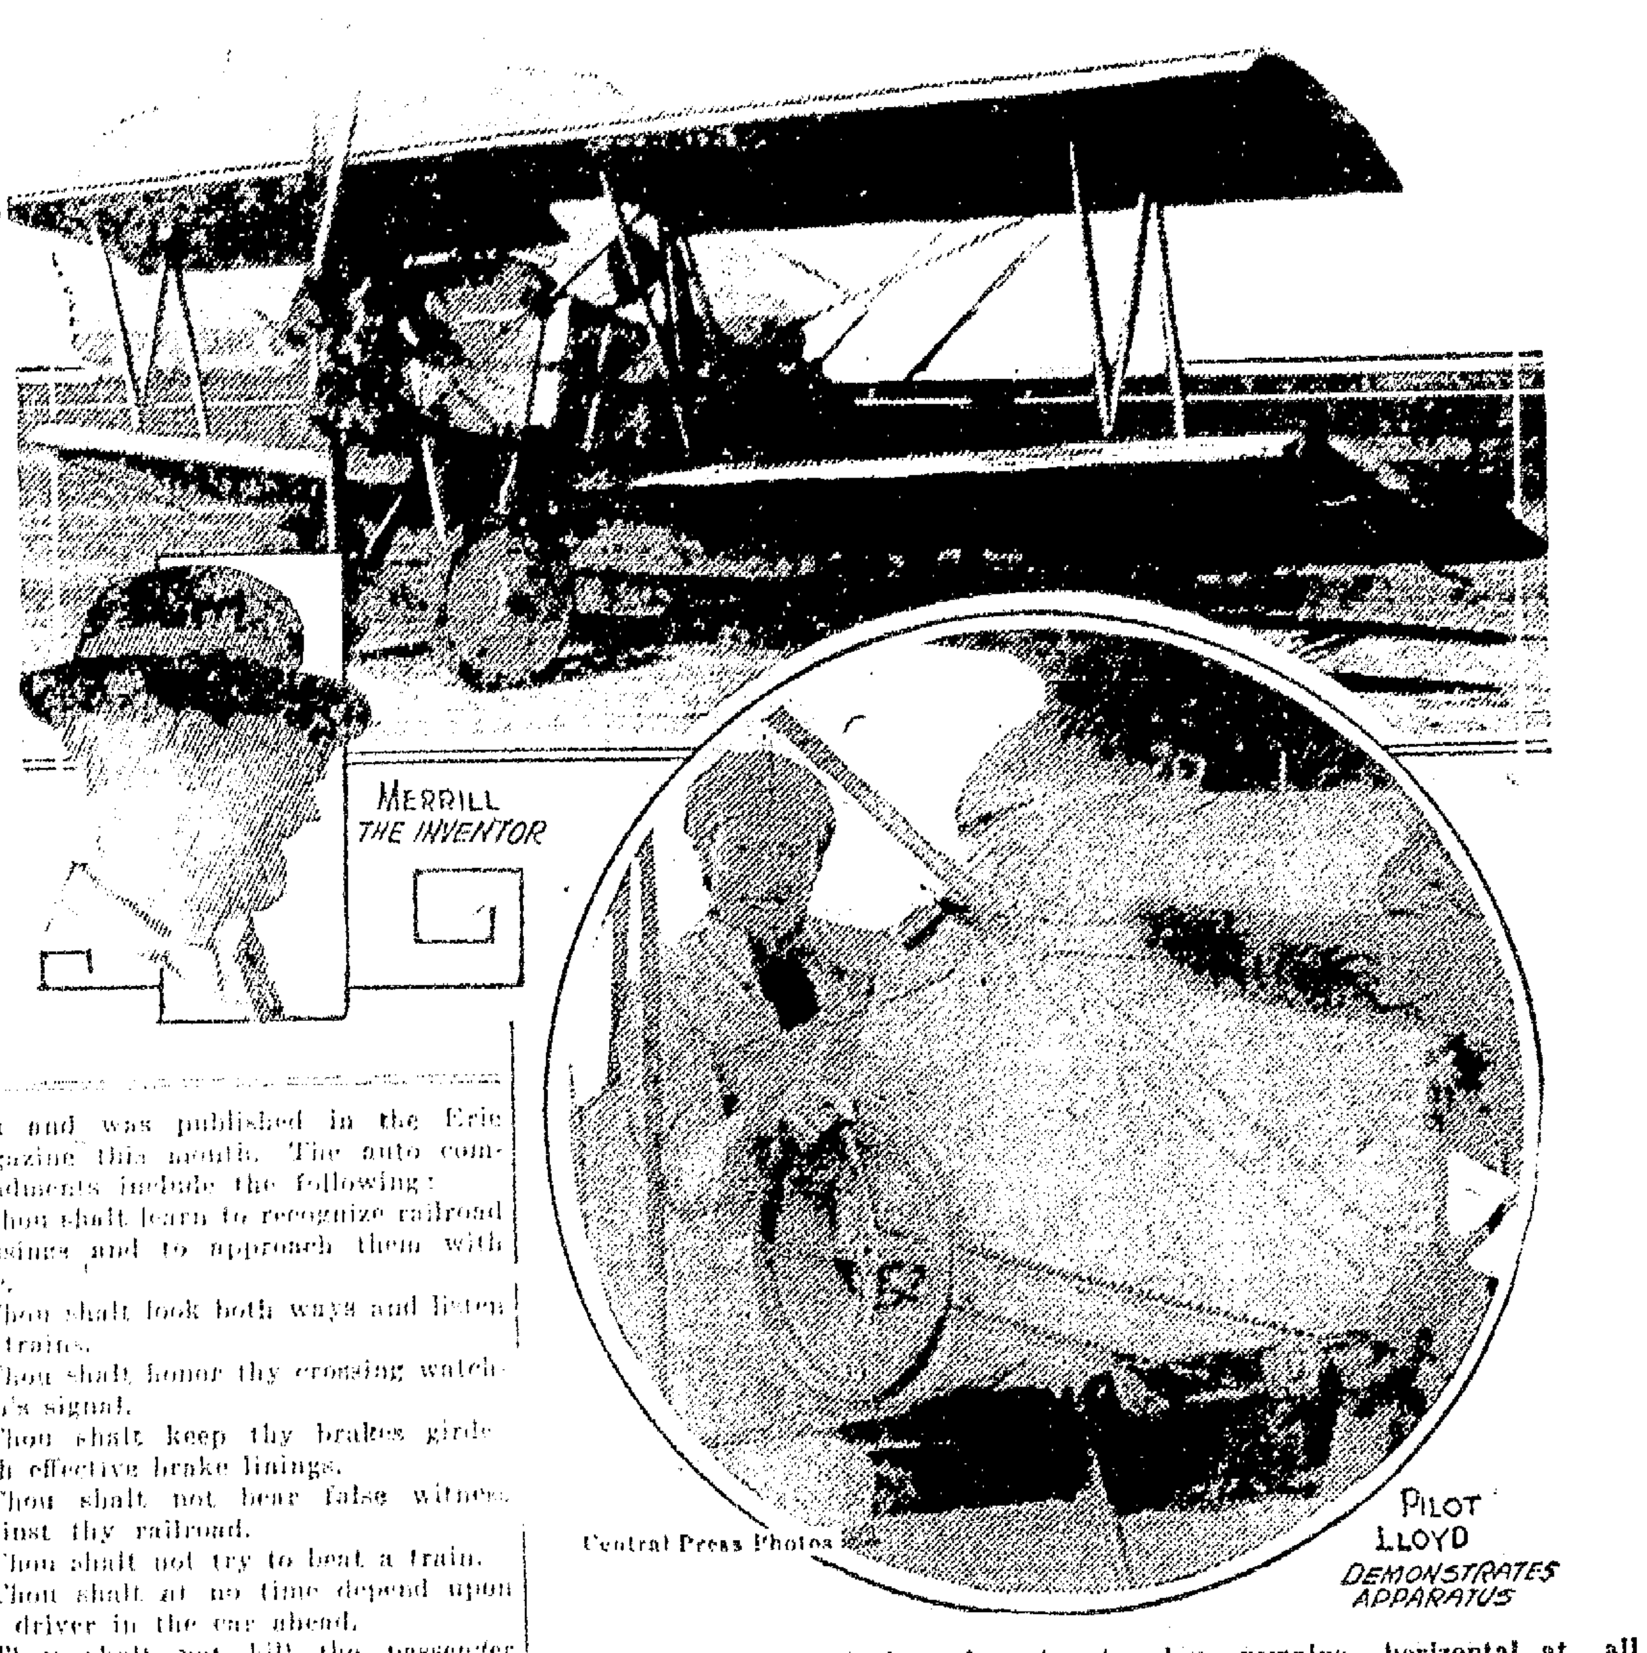
MOVABLE WINGS RAISE AND LOWER NEW STYLE PLANE



Central Press Photos

This new style airplane, invented by A. A. Merrill, instructor in aeronautics at the California Institute of Techology, Pasadena, Cal., raises and lowers itself by changing the position and angle of its movable wings. The body of the plane remains horizontal at all times, never "nosing up" or "nosing down." Top photo shows the plane with its pilot, Robert Lloyd, ready to take of. Note the angle at which the wings now rest, ready for the plane to attain maximum altitude.

Marion Educators Have Different Views on Weeding-Out Undesirable Students

Comment was drawn from two Marion educators on the recent statement of Dr. Harry S. Garfield, president of Williams College, that too many students are seeking college education. Dr. Garfield's conclusion after studying the overcrowding of colleges is that the colleges must weed out the students by raising the entrance standards and take nothing but the "cream" of the students coming up from the high schools and preparatory schools.

Charles B. Rayburn, superintendent of Marion County schools agrees with Dr. Garfield that the colleges are being pushed beyond their limits in trying to handle the mass of students, but he is of the opinion that the "weeding" process should begin down in the grade schools and not wait until the student is ready to enter college before being told that he is unfit for higher education.

That is the whole basis of the present grade and high school education, Rayburn points out. The lower schools now have a diversity of studies just to give the student a chance to find his particular "flare." The parents should co-operate with the teachers in determining what the child is able to do, and should direct his energies toward this end. There are undoubtedly many students, Rayburn says, whom a college education will not make successful if they went to college for 20 years, whereas they might step into work earlier and find the niche in the world easily.

Mason's Angle

Another angle is presented by J. H. Mason, superintendent of Marion schools. His opinion is similar to that of Dr. Thompson, former president of Ohio State University, who talked on this problem of education at the recent meeting of central Ohio teachers in Columbus. Here is what Dr. Thompson said:

"I am wondering what a college president would say, if by chance, his daughter or son should be left off the list when authorities finally determine just who is to constitute the so called "cream" of high school graduates. I continue of the opinion that America will keep the door of opportunity open to all of her youth who will enter."

Elaborating on this view Dr. Thompson said that he expected a general expansion of state educational institutions within a few years. Probably two new state universities, or branch of the state university, one in northern and one in southern Ohio will be needed.

Against Democracy

For the state to start a campaign of "weeding" out students, by making entrance requirements so high that only the "intellectuals" could get in would be against every principle of democracy on which our republic is founded, Dr. Thompson says. Superintendent Mason inclines to this belief also.

The solution as these men see it is in a general broadening of the educational program, both of state and private institutions, to take care of the increased number of students. Otherwise the democratic principles now governing our education will be shattered and we will eventually have education for the few instead of for all.

despite the fact that the couple had been divorced for several years, the Duke of Marlborough has already collected $3,100,000 and continues to receive an income of $100,000 a year from it.

In addition, Vanderbilt agreed to furnish Consuelo with an annual income of $100,000.

To make doubly sure that the duke got his "bit," the contract provided that in case the first trust fund in the duke's favor was voided by Consuelo's Vanderbilt relatives, on the ground that she was not of age, the duke was to received a second trust fund of $2,500,000 which was left by William Henry Vanderbilt to William K. Vanderbilt and which the latter promised to turn over to Consuelo.

In event of Vanderbilt's death, Consuelo was to receive this second trust fund, thus insuring her an annual income of $100,000.

Vanderbilt's distrust of his titled son-in-law was evidenced in the provision that Consuelo should not be allowed to draw in advance a single dollar of her annual income.

But this was matched by a stipulation in favor of the duke that if Consuelo should draw in excess of 10,000 pounds sterling, or $50,000 in any one year, all such funds in excess of the 10,000 pounds sterling should be paid into the ducal trust fund.

Elaborate provisions were made for the investment of the trust funds.

All in consideration of the Duke of Marlborough's giving his hand in marriage to the beautiful Consuelo Vanderbilt.

MAYTAG TELLS ABOUT FOUNDING OF BUSINESS

Convention Here Closes with Meeting and Annual Ball

An address by F. L. Maytag, founder and present head of the Maytag Washing Machine Co., of Newton, Ia., in which he gave an unusually interesting account of how he started in the manufacturing business more than 30 years ago with a capital of $800 and directed the development of an industry which now ranks as the largest of its kind in the world, was the outstanding feature of closing session of the annual Western Ohio Maytag convention, held here yesterday.

More than 300 district managers and other officials and employes of the Maytag Co., with members of their families, made up the company which attended a dinner served at the Star Auditorium last night, and heard Mr. Maytag's graphic recital of the history of his company.

Several other addresses and a number of special entertainment features, including music throughout the evening by the Maytag Night Hawks orchestra of Columbus, were also included in the program. The convention then closed with the annual Maytag ball, for which music was provided by the Night Hawks orchestra.

Mr. Maytag told of his early start in the manufacturing business as a producer of threshing machinery. When this industry showed signs of decline, production of washing machines was introduced as a side-line. For a number of years progress was slow, due to the fact that automatic washers were something practically new and it was necessary to educate the country to acceptance of the innovation.

Tells of Troubles

The Maytag Co. passed through all of the numerous trials and reversals that are usually experienced by most new industries and it was not until 1920 that the remarkable progress which has carried the company to its present world leadership actually began. In that year the present type of aluminum washer was perfected and from then on sales went ahead by leaps and bounds. The plant at Newton is now turning out approximately 1,250 washing machines daily. The sales have grown from $1,000,000 in 1920 to $35,000,000 in 1925 and it is estimated that this year the record will reach the $50,000,000 mark.

Illustrating the trying problems that the Maytag Co. faced during its earlier operations, Mr. Maytag said that there were two years during which no inventory was taken because he and his associates feared the results would be so discouraging that they would decide to abandon their undertaking.

F. J. Rupert of Findlay, district manager of the Maytag Co., was toastmaster during the program which followed the dinner at the Star Auditorium.

Welcome Address

An address of welcome was given by City Solicitor Grant E. Mouser, Jr., of Marion, and other speakers were G. W. Rhodes, branch manager at Indianapolis, V. R Martin of Columbus, divisional manager in Western Ohio, R. A. Caldwell of Milwaukee, representative of the Cramer-Krasselt Advertising Agency, T. F. Bailey of Cleveland, a representative of the Ohio Contract Purchase Co., finance concern which operates in connection with Maytag Co. credit sales, and E. L. Marriage, divisional manager in Eastern Ohio.

Introduction of all district managers from the Western Ohio district and a number from Eastern Ohio took place during the evening.

Included in the company, in addition to the Western Ohio representatives, were officers and agents from a number of points in other states. The gathering as a whole was one of the largest ever assembled here by any industrial organization.

Two "rube" character impersonators from the Keith vaudeville circuit provided special entertainment during the after-dinner program.

Sales Plans Reviewed

An afternoon session of the district managers and other officials and employes was held at Hotel Harding. Sales plans for the next year and a review of progress made during the last year were discussed and it was generally agreed that next year's record in the district will probably surpass even the notable achievements of 1925.

J. W. Rhodes, manager of the Indianapolis branch, which includes the Western Ohio district, stated that his branch hopes to lead all others in sales next year.

Plans for centering a special sale campaign for the "multimotor" type of washer in the rural districts were announced and discussed during the day. This washer is operated with gasolene motor power and is intended primarily for country homes where electric power is not available.

Following the conference at Hotel Harding, there was a street parade made up of about 50 of the Maytag yellow official trucks from agencies throughout Western Ohio.

The Maytag agency in Marion is located at 135 S. State-st and is under the management of Pearl Bateman.

ASSERTS CONGRESS WON'T O. K. TAX PLAN

Texas Democrat Declares It Unfair To Turn Back Taxes to Corporations

Washington, Nov. 20—Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democrat on the house ways and means committee, today told Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that congress would not approve the administration's tax credit plan.

"I tried to convince Mellon of the impossibility of his position and in turn he tried to show me how foolish I am," said Garner.

"It is unfair to turn back taxes to corporations. Why should we give back to the Aluminum Co. money it has already collected from housewives.

He is a wise man who knows when to tear up a letter he has just written.

was his "full brother." The witness said "yes."

"Do you know the church in the south has no record of his birth?"

"No."

"Do you swear he is a son of your mother and not a mulatto?"

"Yes."

Simpson shot several questions at the witness who insisted he didn't know anything about automatic pistols.

"I never once fired an automatic," the witness said.

"It would take a pretty good marksman to put three bullets in a woman's head in the dark?" Simpson asked.

"It would depend on distance."

"Say six feet. It would take a pretty good marksman?"

"I wouldn't think it would take a marksman at all."

Simpson asked the witness if he knew the time the shots were fired that killed Mrs. Mills. Stevens said he did not.

"Then," demanded Simpson, "why did you tell Captain Harry Walsh you were on the beach at Lavalette at 10:30 o'clock so as to put yourself on the beach the exact time before the shots were fired?"

Stevens was slightly ruffled for the first time.

"I was on the beach until 10:30 o'clock and I told what I did to the best of my ability."

Simpson asked Stevens how long it would take to go from Lavalette to New Brunswick in a Ford. Stevens said, "From two and one-quarter to two and one-half hours."

The prosecutor turned and shouted:

"Stand up, Pete."

"Pete" did.

"Didn't you tell that man you knew a route that would get you there in an hour and a half?" Simpson cried.

"I told him I knew a short way."

Not At Wedding

Stevens insisted his relations with Mr. Hall were "very pleasant," that he was shocked to learn he was killed. He admitted however, he did not go to the undertaker's to look upon the dead man's face.

Simpson drew the admission that Stevens did not attend his sister's wedding, but the reason was not because he hated Dr. Hall, the witness said.

"What did you think of the marriage?" Simpson asked.

"I didn't think much of it."

Stevens said in reply to a question that he never saw a revolver in Dr. Hall's possession. He did believe, however, that Willie had a revolver. He saw this revolver "years before the murder".

"Did you ever carry a fishing knife?" Simpson asked.

"I used to carry a knife with my bait. I used it to clean fish on the night of Sept. 14, 1922."

"When your sister was arrested and in jail for 40 hours, why didn't you visit her?"

"Your brother Willie was in jail for several weeks and told his sister that he wanted you to visit him, but you never went?"

"No."

Simpson then said sarcastically:

"I'll tell you why you didn't go to see them. You were afraid to come because you might be identified and were afraid you would get your nose in a jam."

Adjournment for luncheon was then declared.

measures in the work the Red Cross is doing would be no better than no aid at all, is the oponion advanced by the majority of the members of the executive committee.

December Work Assured

Chapter officials today declared that the local organization had sufficient funds to last out the month of December without breaking into the Roll Call subscription of this year.

Basing an estimate on the amounts of money required to operate the local chapter during previous years, Mr. Stoll and Mrs. Geran placed the sum necessary for a month's maintenance at an average of $900.

This figure, of course, includes the $300 given to the national organization each year for its disaster fund.

Civilian relief which includes free nursing service, food and fuel to destitute families, requires about $3,500 each year.

Aid to ex-soldiers and sailors, including food, fuel and nursing service costs the Marion County chapter approximately $4,500 a year.

Service to ex-soldiers and sailors, adjusting compensation and arranging for hospitalization amounts to $1,000 a year.

Public Health Work

The remaining sums are expended by carrying on a public health and nutrition education service among the school children and their parents and for the conduction of the organization.

The present organization consists of an executive secretary, and assistant secretary who cares for the ex-service men's papers, and two nurses.

A third nurse, whose salary and automobile are furnished by the city, has headquarters at the Red Cross rooms in the Trumbull building.

Demonstrating the fact that the local chapter of Red Cross is one of the essential organizations of the city the officials stated that each nurse make on an average, 30 calls each day.

"In Own Field"

The Red Cross chapter is in a field that is particularly its own, the members of the executive board, who serve without pay, claimed today. It is the only organization in the city which furnishes ex-service men and civilians with free medical advice and nursing services; it takes care of all of the complicated an involved correspondence between the government and ex-service men seeking compensation or hospitalization; it teaches children and parents the proper body building foods; it teaches life saving methods and the proper mode of resuscitation in case of drowning or shock by electric current.

These and many other duties too numerous to mention have become a direct responsibility of the Marion County Chapter, Red Cross, according to the workers.

SEVENTH GRADE WINNER AT COMMUNITY MEETING

Awarded Banner for Having Largest Number of Parents Present

Pupils of the Seventh Grade taught by Miss Wanda McMahan were awarded the banner for having the largest number of parents in attendance at the meeting of the State Street Community Club last night at the school building. During a business session the president, Leo Keiler appointed the following committees: Mrs Lester McIntire, Mrs. C. L. Myers, Mrs. J. H. Todd and Mrs. Charles Lamb, social; Mrs. Clifford Knight, Mrs. W. R. Clay and Mrs. George Bechtle, ways and means; Henry Baker, J. H. Todd, Don Orahood and B. J. Shelton, improvements; Miss Naomi Rinehart, Mrs. George Griffiths and Mrs. Mildred Baughman, program; Mrs. Richard Miller, Mrs. Alvah Alexander, Mrs. Florence Brannon and Thomas Leih, membership.

Eutoka Welsh and Alice Shelton opened the program with a piano duet which was followed by a paper on "The State Street Student Council," by Harry Nepman. A dramatic and musical entertainment, "The Soul of Priscilla," was presented by pupils of the Seventh and Eighth Grades. The play tells the story of a dream of Priscilla as she sit at the spinning wheel. The settings and costumes are in Colonial style and the spinning wheel used in a genuine antique. Miss Pauline Shelton played the part of Priscilla and Carrol Dibline of Columbia. The cast included 25 children. Following the program a social hour was enjoyed by 125 guests. Refreshments in keeping with the Colonial play were served. The next meeting will be Dec. 21.

DENY ROCHESTER STONE SHAKESPEARE SOUVENIR

Stratford-on-Avon, Nov. 20 "The story is untrue that any stone from Shakespeare's tomb has been sent to the chancel of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Rochester, (N. Y.)," says Rev. W. G. Melville, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, Stratford-on-Avon.

"It was," he says, "a piece of the step outside of the altar rail, which was removed some time ago because it was to narrow; it was replaced by a wider one.

"It was a modern piece of stone, cut probably 25 years ago. It would interest America as being from Shakespeare's church; but it had no connection with the poet.

NINE ARE DEAD IN EXPLOSION OF OIL TANKER

Blast Believed To Have Been Caused by Gas in Storage Tank

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 20—Eight horribly mutilated bodies had been recovered this morning from the smouldering ruin of the Norwegian oil tanker Mantilla and from eight to a dozen workmen believed to have been about the ship have not yet been accounted for by rescuers and firemen, gingerly poking about the ship in momentary fear of another explosion. One man, Trona Hersson, a member of the crew, died this morning from burns.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by gas generated in one of the ship's storage tanks.

The Mantilla has been in drydock at Sparrow's Point for several weeks undergoing repairs. She was to have gone into the service of the Mexican Petroleum Co. on Monday. W. Wilhelmson, Ponsberg, Norway, is the owner.

Oil Scattered

The big tanker was alive with workmen at the time of the explosion. Burning oil was scattered over a wide area and firemen had to fight for hours to prevent the spread of a serious conflagration. They had to work carefully, too, in momentary expectation of a second blast from another tank. Captain Nils Danielsen, commanding the Mantilla, said the ship was literally blown apart.

He was on the dock when the explosion occurred.

"The air was full of flying steel and burning oil," said Captain Danielsen. "Men were running around with their clothing afire with pain. I saw several with arms blown off. It was the most terrible thing I ever saw."

May Never Know

An accurate casualty list will not be possible until some time today when officials complete a checkup of the injured who were rushed to hospitals by every available conveyance.

The exact death list may never be known. Officials do not certainly how many of the missing were aboard the boat when the blast came and this has rendered difficult an accurate check.

The injured number 40 and a few of these are so seriously hurt their deaths are expected.

ELKS' SHOW REHEARSAL TO BE HELD MONDAY

The postponed rehearsal of the cast for the Elks' Charity Minstrels, to be given Dec. 13, 14 and 15, will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night at the lodge rooms, it was announced today. Last night's rehearsal was postponed until this date on account of the old-fashioned dance. It is important that every one be present for the rehearsal, it was announced.

Here Are The Improvements

Review this impressive list of improvements—a notable twelve-months' record of progressive engineering:

A new five-bearing crankshaft (replacing the three-bearing type).
A new two-unit starting and lighting system (replacing the single-unit type).
Air cleaner of improved design.
Spark and throttle levers placed above the wheel for greater convenience.
Rumble seat for Sport Roadster.
Stylish new body lines.
Rich and attractive new colors.
Improved all-steel body construction.
Increased driving vision.
Indirect dial lighting for De Luxe and Sport types.
Far greater riding comfort.
Impressive new smoothness and silence of engine operation.

Greater beauty, greater convenience and remarkable new silence and smoothness of engine operation have followed these vital betterments.

Marie Has Stood the Test.

It would have been a matter for regret had Marie of Roumania been forced to abandon her American visit for any reason. It is many times more a matter for regret that the reason for her hurried return to her home land is the illness of her husband. It may be noted that we are here speaking of the faithful wife—not of the queen. Possibly there may be reasons of state, also, which urge the speedy return of the queen. Let us not consider the queen for the moment, but rather the wife, for there unquestionably are many among us who have shown that they have neither honor nor respect for the queen, but surely they can be but few who have fallen so out of tune with the spirit of humanity that they will not sympathize with the wife who cuts her long-looked-forward-to visit short to return to her sick husband.

The visit of Marie has been marred by many unfortunate incidents which must be matters for general regret. We use the word general, it may be observed, not universal, in this connection. Some of them were the result of acquaintances formed by her prior to her coming to America of which advantage has been taken since her arrival upon our shores. But by far the most unfortunate incidents have been due to a lack of appreciation of the ordinary decencies of life by some individuals and elements whose breeding has not been such as to cause them to accord that treatment which is due an unoffending guest. We refer to the attempts to regulate our distinguished visitor's personal habits and customs, which are the habits and customs of her home land, and to the attempts of certain elements among us, many of them alien, to hold her responsible for alleged conditions in her home country of which they do not approve. She is so bright that we have reason to hope that she will realize that such exhibitions of lack of taste do not reflect the attitude of the American people as a whole.

We had hoped that the last month of Marie's contemplated stay might serve to erase in part recollection of such offenses against taste and breeding, but such is not to be. She will sail for home next Wednesday without this month of hoped-for freedom from annoyance, and our hope is that she may take back with her as kindly feeling for the great mass of Americans as the great mass of Americans have for her.

Our visitor came to us no more on trial than we as a people were on trial. All will concede that she has proved herself to be a bright and charming woman, a woman of tact and graciousness, a woman of perfect poise and goodly intellectuality. She has shown that she is a loving and considerate mother and a devoted wife. She has stood the test superbly—far better than have we as a people—and she will leave taking with her the kindliest thoughts of Americans as a whole and our sincere hopes that the condition of her husband's heart will so improve as to cheer her when she is once more back in her own land.

It's for the People To Decide.

An unnamed member of council was quoted in Friday's Star in defense of the new arrangement of ward lines as saying that the plan followed was along the lines of those followed in other cities; that investigation will show that ward boundaries in most of the larger cities are generally irregular, often being in the form of circles and rectangles and frequently with one ward virtually established in the center of another. Possibly so. Politics possibly may be considered in most of our larger cities and be played just as we see it played in gerrymandering congressional districts, but that is no reason we here in Marion should be influenced by the results of such political practices. And while there may be many odd-shaped wards in some of our larger cities, as stated, we seriously doubt if all the land can produce the fellow of the new Fifth ward, which, running by jagged and irregular lines from the extreme eastern end of the city to the southwestern corner through which the north-and-south railroads pass, offers what must be taken as a composite of the worst of all of them. As we have stated, the like of it has never been produced either by man or nature.

We fear that council has followed the wrong line of thought in working out its ward plan. Its idea has been, so it is stated by members, to divide the city into six wards with as few changes as possible in order to lessen the cost of the change and the inconvenience of the servants of the city and the election board in making it, at the same time keeping in mind the idea of maintaining a similarity of population in the various wards. We can not see the cost argument and certainly there can not be much in the population idea when the wards, as divided, range from approximately 1,150 to 3,500. As for the matter of convenience, to our mind the convenience of the people should be considered first of all. It is the belief of this paper that, no matter what the divisions may be, they should be divisions of localities rather than of lines. By this we mean that the various wards should be so laid out that we could be able to recognize them at once from their locality. If this is the general view, it should be impressed as such upon council. If it is not the general view, if the people as a whole are satisfied with the new ward arrangement, far be it from this paper's desire to complain.

Council has extended a welcome to citizens to appear before it and express their views upon the subject. The story carrying the invitation stated that "at present there is no probability of the action taken being rescinded," but this does not estop any citizens who may wish to present their views with the idea of putting the proposition before the public from the citizens' side, rather than the council's. If such views carry the popular feeling what this council may or may not do is of little moment, for if the popular will is opposed to the council's action it will not be a matter of much difficulty to retire the present council as the terms of its members expire and elect one which will reflect the public will.

The explanation of Mr. Mills' statement, that he didn't know of the love of his wife for that New Brunswick pastor, may be that he thought she was merely joshing when she detailed to him her plan to elope to Japan with the parson.

Having been in Chicago and seen the worst of us, it's a pity that Queen Marie couldn't have evened things up by visiting the very heart of the garden spot of the world, but we guess there's no hope of her coming back here before she sails, more's the pity.

By printing Mr. Taft's statement, that "the administration of criminal law in the United States is a disgrace to civilization," without stating that it was uttered before Mr. Taft became chief justice of the United States, the endowment fund committee of Harvard law school manifested not only an utter lack of taste, but also a lack of common courtesy. But coming right down to brass tacks, the statement fits the situation just as closely today as it did when Mr. Taft made it.

Long time the meighan foe he sought;
So rested he by the pickford tree
And stood awhile in thought.

And as in keaton thought he stood,
The barthelmess, with eyes of flame,
Came pringling through the holly wood,
And [illegible] as he came.

One, two! One, two! and through and through
The chaplin blade went snicker-snack!
He left it flat, and with its hat
He went koslofing back.

"And hast thou [illegible] the barthelmess?
Come to my arms, my [illegible] boy!
O [illegible] day! [illegible]
He chortled in his joy.

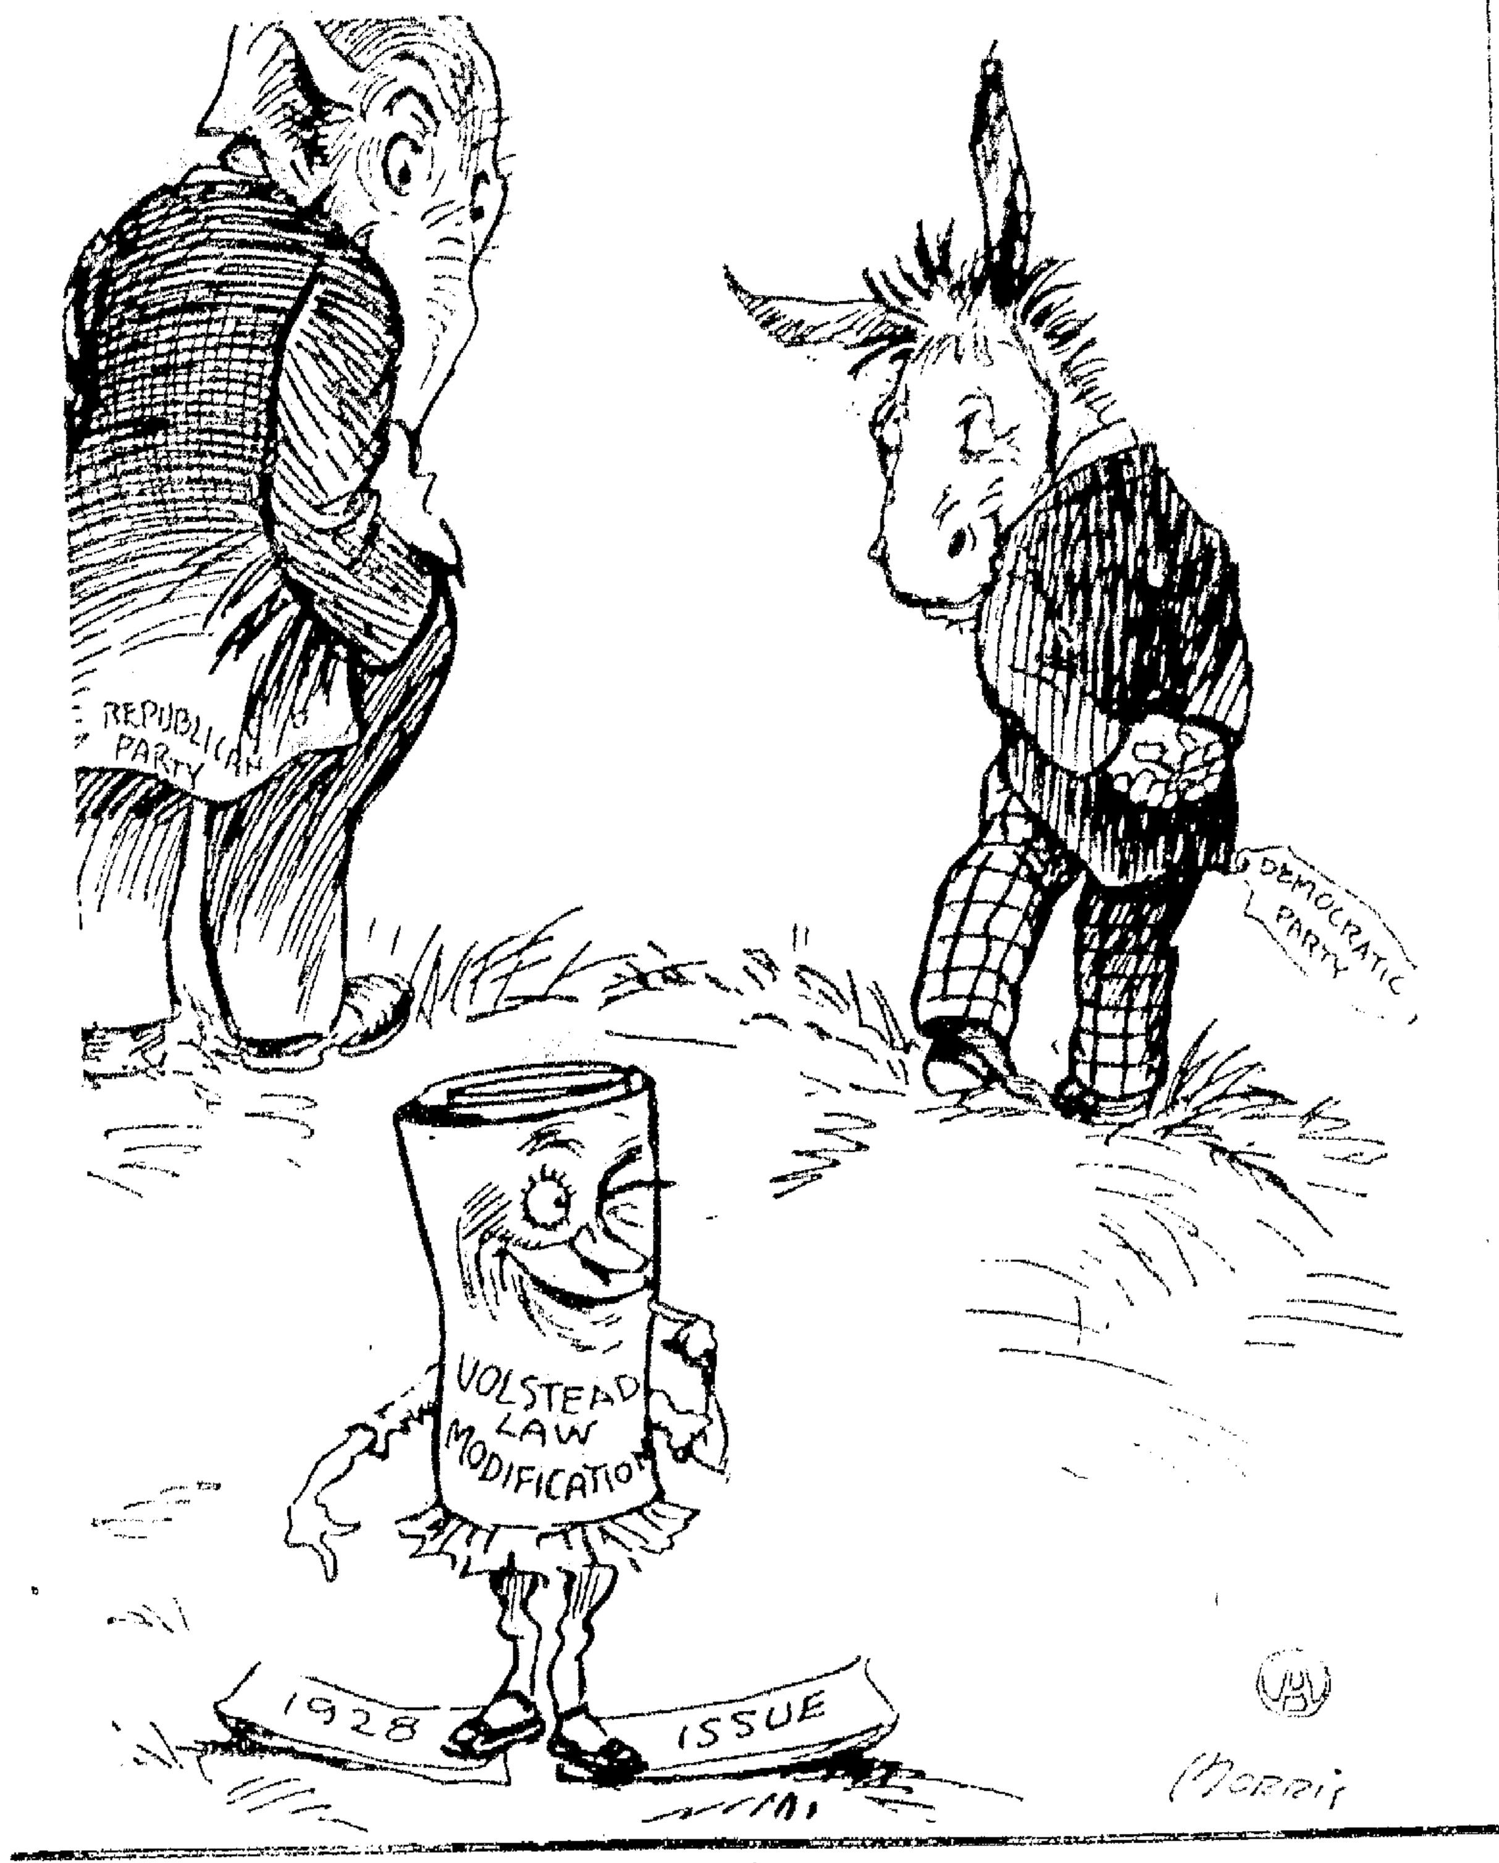
"HERE I STAND ON TWO LITTLE CHIPS, WHO WILL KISS MY TWO LITTLE LIPS?"



Sudden Death Bogie Mythical.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

One of the most common of all fears is the dread of heart disease. Why is it? Because of the popular idea that sudden death is to be its end.

You will be surprised when I tell you this wide spread belief is not well founded.

An eminent physician, Dr. Alexander Lambert, of New York, has published recently a very valuable monograph. It is called "Sudden Death, Cardiac Pain and Angina Pectoris." You will be interested particularly in one paragraph which I quote.

"All pathologists to whom the question constantly arises as to the cause of sudden death lay stress upon the fact that the overwhelming cause of instant, sudden, unexpected deaths do occur from some forms of heart disease; yet statistics show that the number of sudden deaths compared with the total number of deaths from cardiac diseases is really small, indeed."

Statistics are dry things usually, but in this discussion they are extremely interesting. In 1894, in New York City, there were 71,252 deaths. Heart disease caused 15,286 of these, or about twenty-two per cent. In the group of the acute heart affections which would be likely to cause sudden, unexpected death there were only 662 cases. This means that only four per cent. of deaths from heart disease were of this type. Angina was recorded as the cause of death in 410 cases, two and one-half per cent. of all the heart cases.

The fact is, heart disease is much more likely to be a long standing, chronic thing than it is to be a cause for sudden and unexpected death. It may produce invalidism which will run on for months or years. When it is present it must be put down as a contributing cause of death, but the chances are some acute illness will be the direct cause.

I speak of this gruesome subject because I want to reassure such of my readers as suffer from heart disease. There is not more than one chance in twenty-five that sudden death will come to you because of your chronic disability. With reasonable care you may live out almost the normal expectation of life.

It is better to avoid the things which make for heart disease than it is to have an ailment which must be given consideration through a lifetime. Simple living and immediate attention to every illness—this is the rule for you to follow.

Attend to your teeth, make sure that the tonsils are all right. Do not neglect your colds. Overwork and overworry are silly practices.

Adenoids in children must be removed. Intestinal and stomach disorders should not be neglected.

By following a few simple rules you will avoid heart disease and escape sudden death.

Some Questions of Interest Asked and Answered.

Q. What determines the size of halos around the sun and moon? L. K. W.

A. There are two kinds of rings about the sun and moon. Those that are close in—only one to four or five diameters of the moon, say, away—which we call coronas, are caused by water droplets. The smaller the droplets, the larger the ring. The other rings, the true halos, occurring much farther away, are caused by ice crystals. There are several such rings, but each one always has the same angular size. This size depends on the shape of the crystal—(usually, but not always, a short six-sided column with flat ends perpendicular to the sides)—the course of the light through the crystal, and the amount of bending this light undergoes as it enters a face of the crystal at a given slope.

Q. What were the first buildings to be lighted by electricity? H. S. B.

A. The first church to be so lighted was the City temple, London; the first theater, the Bijou, Boston, December 12, 1882; first hotel, Blue Mountain House, in the Adirondacks, 1881; first private residence, that of J. Hood Wright, of New York City. The first steamer to be electrically-lighted was the Columbia, plying between San Francisco and Portland, Oregon.

Q. What was the strength of the German cavalry in the World war? T. D. T.

A. In August, 1914, the approximate strength of the German cavalry was 85,000 men and horses. The 550 squadrons were organized into 110 regiments. From these eleven cavalry divisions were formed, the extra squadrons being assigned as corps and divisional cavalry. The number of mounted divisions was decreased to four in 1918. Stabilized warfare and the shortage of horses as war progressed caused the dismounting of some of the cavalry divisions and their use as infantry divisions. Thirty-nine regiments of reserve cavalry were organized soon after the war began, which were allotted principally to infantry divisions. The strength of a squadron was about 150. A regiment had normally five squadrons, one being a depot squadron. The cavalry division had three brigades of two regiments each, three horse artillery batteries, a pioneer and signal detachment, and a machine gun detachment.

Q. Do women read more than men? V. N. P.

A. According to a recent survey by the New York public library, the opposite is true. A count was made once an hour for a week, and it was found that the average for the week was eighty-three men readers to seventeen women.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

If you visit the John McCormick Institute for Infectious Diseases in Chicago, you may be fortunate to see Dr. Ruth Tunnicliff. She has spent twenty-five years in research work in the hope of giving the mothers of the world a serum which will prevent measles. Some day when that discovery is made, it will probably attract little attention. Few will have heard of Dr. Tunnicliff and her work. But it is for women like her that the monuments ought to be erected.

Don't get the idea that you are deprived of education by lack of money or opportunity. It doesn't take much money, and there is much opportunity for self-education. Did you know there are 5,000 enrolled now in the reading courses of the bureau of education of the interior department of the United States government? More than half are under sixteen, and of the grown-ups, more than half are women. Youth is more ambitious than age. Woman, apparently, is more ambitious than man.

The courses include history, foreign trade, agriculture and many other subjects. There are amazing things about our government that few of us know. The free service it offers is a surprise to those who investigate.

The sleepless student thinks faster, but his body pays for it. This is proved by tests made by psychologists. Try it on yourself—but not too often. If you sleep but three or four hours your brain will seem keener the next morning. Much sleep causes sluggish thinking. But if you keep up with your three or four hour sleep program you will probably break down before long. Perhaps its better to thing longer and not quite so fast.

Taxes don't have quite such an unpleasant sound as they once did. You learn that next March big income tax payers are to have twelve and a half per cent. of their tax money handed back. That's what reduction means.

Touch a man's taxes and you touch him where he lives.

Few who wear black clothes for mourning realize why they do it. In ancient times the "ghosts" of the dead were believed to hover about a funeral. Barbarians thought it best to make themselves as inconspicuous as possible on such occasions. They were afraid of the ghosts. They dressed with no paint and no gay colors. The subdued tones of mourning are an outgrowth of a custom that roots back into tradition.

Who's Who and Why.

MAJOR GENERAL EDGAR JADWIN.

In his annual report as chief of engineers of the United States army, Major General Edgar Jadwin attacked piecemeal appropriations for America's defense measures as expensive, and urged the adoption of a revised general fortification projject which will place the national harbor defenses in a condition to ward off naval attack. "Appropriations should either be based on the economic expenditure of funds or deferred altogether until the government can afford to provide sufficient money to complete the work in a few years," the general says.

He has had a colorful career. As colonel of an American engineer regiment during the war, he violated the formalities and "red tape" of the war department and apparently threw the whole maze of official restrictions to the winds when he learned that the government wanted his regiment to get to France in the shortest possible time. He refused even to ask for assistance from the department, but arranged for the equipment of every man in his regiment, and when he had finished he briefly informed the department that his regiment was "ready for foreign service." The result was that the Fifteenth United States engineers, his command, was the first American regiment to pass under arms in England.

In addition to being one of the most distinguished engineer officers in the United States army, for which he won the appointment as chief of engineers in the war department, General Jadwin served as construction engineer on the Panama canal under General Goethals. He was a member of the Morgenthau commission and was appointed as a special observer of conditions in the Ukraine by the American peace delegation. And he has been in charge of many of the greatest American inland waterways' projects.

Major General Jadwin was born at Honesdale, Pennsylvania, August 7, 1865. He was a student at Lafayette college for two years, and is a graduate of the United States Military academy and the Engineering School of Application.

Upper Sandusky High School Defeats Old Rival in Grid Thriller

CAREY WEAKENS AFTER PLAYING FIRST HALF, 0-0

Fritchie and Bauer Big Factors in Running Up 39-0 Score

Upper Sandusky, Nov. 20—Two [illegible], bitter enemies, waged their annual battle for gridiron supremacy Friday afternoon at Harrison Smith park. One, Upper Sandusky High School completely crushed the other, Carey High School, by a 39 to 0 defeat.

For years the big game of the Upper [illegible] Football team, the game most looked forward to, is the yearly struggle with Carey High. Hated rivalry existing between the two teams gives [illegible] energy and dog like tenacity on both sides.

The years, '22, '23 and '24 showed Carey the victor, with Upper tying the [illegible] last year. A determination to gain the upper hand in the fray was the absorbing thought in the minds of the Upper football eleven this year. They accomplished their purpose.

Carey was not a foe to be easily conquered which was shown by the fact that at the close of the first half the score stood 0 to 0.

Upper Goal Threatened

Only once during the entire game did Carey threaten the Upper goal line. The ball was in Carey's possession on Upper's 14-yard line. Gardner, a Carey gridder crashed through to the ten-yard line and made the first down but the pass that followed was not completed and the ball was lost to Upper.

Fritchie was the outstanding player on the home team bringing victory to his team by his spectacular end runs. Bauer followed close with more touchdowns to his credit than Fritchie but not displaying the sensational playing which characterized Fritchie's gains.

Play by Play

The game play by play was as follows: Bauer won the toss and chose to defend the north goal. Cary keked it to Fleck who caught the ball on the 15 yard line and ran to the 38 yard line before he was downed. In the third down Bauer punted and Carey got the ball on their 30 yard line. On fourth down, Winans punted to Fleck who received the ball on his 25 yard line. The kicking duel continued, Bauer punted to Carey who received it on their 40 yard line and returned it to the 45 yard line before being tackled. Carey gained two yards in the play that followed and after a three yard and a one yard gain in two successive plays they punted to Fleck on his fifteen yard line and made ten yards in the run. Bauer made first down on the four plunge. Fritchie progressed to the 41 yard line taking a route around the end and Bauer punted to Carey's 30 yard line after two plays. The quarter ended scoreless with the ball in Carey's possession on their 38 yard line.

Second Period

Carey punted to Fleck on his seventeen yard line. Bauer punted in fourth down from his 23d yard line to the 35 yard line where Carey received the ball and A. Gardner made eight yards. Gardner plunged through Upper's line again for the first down. Carey shoved four yards ahead in the next two plays. The ball was on Upper's 14 yard line. Gardner crashed through the line to the ten yard line and made first down and next was thrown for a six yard loss. Carey passed but could not complete the play and the ball went to Upper. Fritchie [illegible] the ball around left end from Upper's 15 yard line, gaining nine yards. Dumit made first down. Bauer punted to Carey's 35 yard stripe on fourth down. Gardner made two yards, adding another three yards in the following play. After Gardner made first down he plunged again for two yards. Carey carried the ball from their 48 yard line to the 50 when the gun announced the end of the first half and the score stood at 0 to 0.

Third Period

Kraus kicked off and recovered his own kickoff on the 50 yard line. Fritchie ran 15 yards followed by a sensational 35 yard run around left end to Carey's 9 yard line. He made a right end run for the first touchdown. A pass Bauer to Fleck was successful for the extra point.

Upper kicked to Carey. Gardner caught the ball on the 20 yard line and rambled 11 yards before being downed. Carey punted to Bauer on [illegible] 45 yard line. He returned to the [illegible] yard line. Fritchie now having the ball sprinted around left end to Carey's [illegible] yard line. Bauer gained two yards. Fleck walked the ball to Carey's 31 yard line, Bauer continued the march down the field with a flying trip to Carey's 8 yard line. Bauer smashed [illegible] for the second touchdown. A pass, Bauer to Krauss, gave Upper the extra point. Score now read 14 to 0.

Upper kicked off to Carey who re[illegible] the ball on the 30 yard line and carried it 9 yards when Gardner fumbled ball. Kraus recovered the ball on Carey's 33 yard line. [illegible] made the slight gain of a yard. Bauer crashed through for 8 yard[illegible] Bauer made first down. Fritchie by his never failing end route ran [illegible] the 19 yard line to Carey's 5 yard [illegible] Bauer bucked the line and the touchdown for Upper was rolled [illegible] score. A pass Bauer to Fleck was unsuccessful for the extra point.

Upper kicked to Carey on the 31 [illegible] A pass A. Gardner to R. [illegible] was incomplete. A Gardner [illegible] but recovered ball losing 3 [illegible] Carey punted to Fleck on his 5 [illegible] line, who carried the ball to [illegible] 31 yard line. Fritchie around [illegible] for 4 yards. Upper penalized [illegible] yards. Fritchie failed to gain. Pass [illegible] Fleck gained two yards, and [illegible] 4. Bauer punted to Carey's [illegible] line and quarter ended 20 to 0 [illegible] of Upper Sandusky.

Fourth Period

[illegible] fumbled the fal lon their 8 [illegible] line, Voelker recovering. Bauer [illegible] the following play losing a [illegible]. Bauer made a touchdown from the 4 yard line. Fleck drop kicked for the extra point.

Upper kicked to Carey who received the ball on the 30 yard line returned it 9 yards. Carey made first down in two plays. A pass by A. Gardner was intercepted by Bauer but he ran outside on the 48 yard line. Fritchie carried the ball twice. Bauer made first down in two plays. On the third attempt Fritchie ran again from 8 yard line passed the goal post and Upper Sandusky scored another touchdown. Fleck failed to drop kick. Score stood 33 to 0.

Upper kicked to A. Gardner on his 5 yard line. Ritterspach displayed fine tackling ability and stopped Gardner after a yard gain. Carey made three yards, made first down in second play, made 1-2 yard in first down, 3 yards in second, 1 yard in third and punted to Upper in fourth. Upper gets ball on their 45 yard line. Fritchie ran 25 yards being stopped on Carey's 30 yard line. From the 30 yard line Fritchie crashed through for the last touchdown of the game. Fleck failed to kick goal. The remaining minutes of the play Carey made first down. When whistle ended game Carey had the ball in their possession on Upper's 45 yard line.

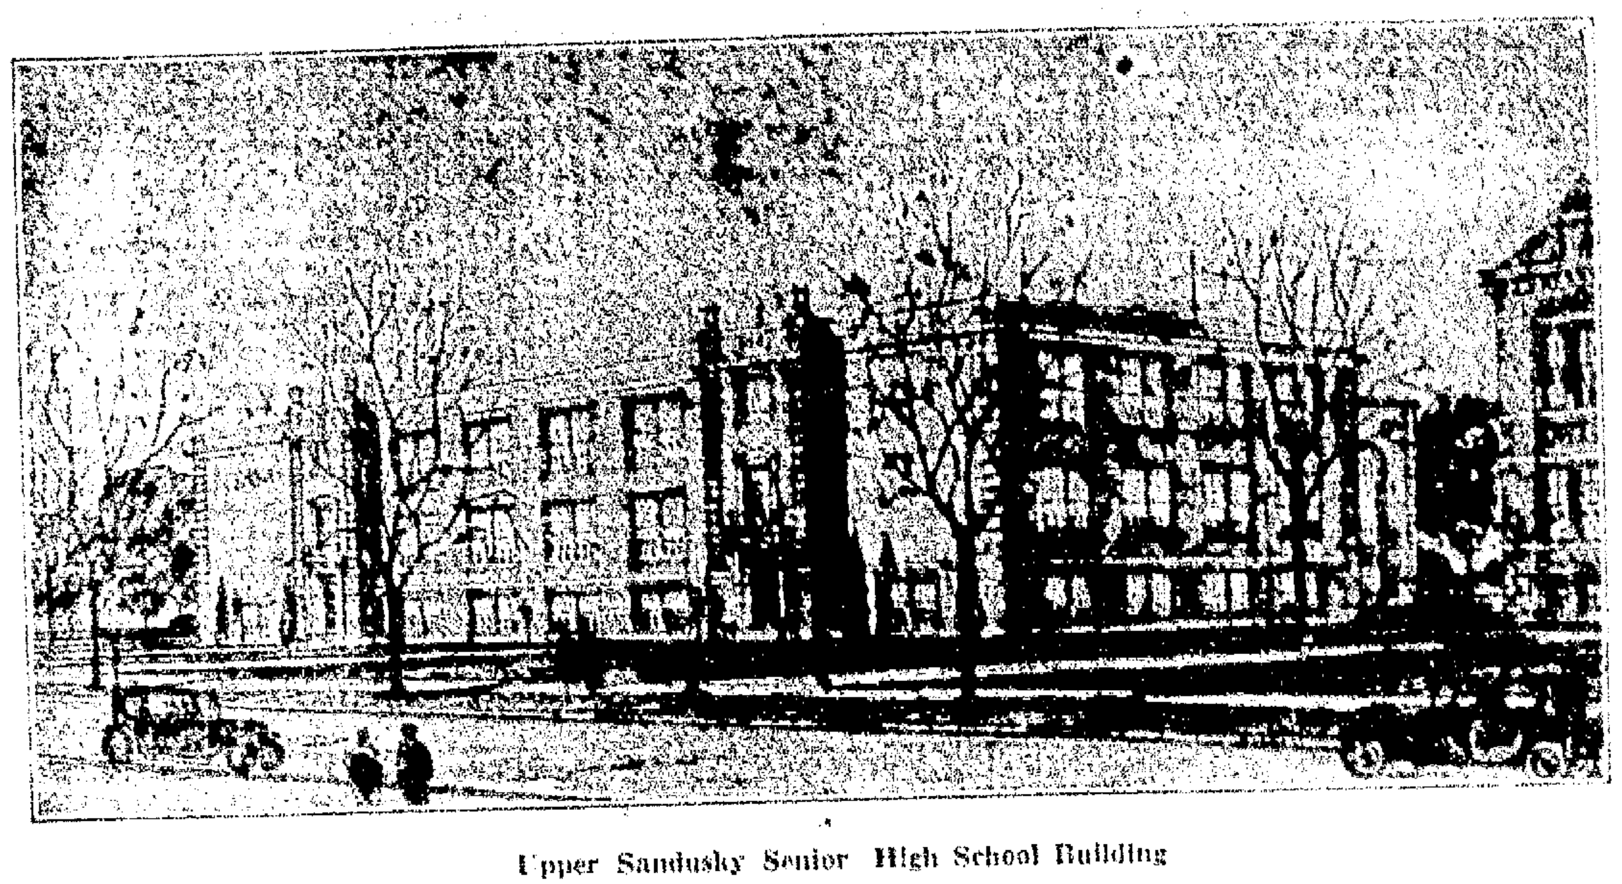
Future Has Promise of Growth And Prosperity For Village of Upper Sandusky, Seat of Wyandot County

School Facilities of Marion's Neighbor Town Are Complete in Every Detail



Upper Sandusky Senior High School Building

BY GILMORE HIETT
State Editor, The Star

WITH a future as an industrial center of no mean possibilities and a past record that is interlined with plaudits of its high standing among Ohio towns as an agricultural center, it is not preposterous to venture that some day will find the village of Upper Sandusky a thriving city of several thousand people.

Reasons for this statement are to be found on every hand on visiting the seat of Wyandot County.

Upper Sandusky was incorporated as a village in 1843 and named the seat of Wyandot County in 1845. As the year of incorporation indicates, it may be regarded as practically a young town, being less than 100 years of age. For many years prior to 1843 it was one of the leading market centers in this section, being located near the center of the 10 mile square Indian Reservation, delivered to the state by a treaty purchase agreement.

What Dickens Wrote

Much has been said by writers of prestige and without prestige of the history of the county. Charles Dickens in his American Notes refers to the night that he spent at the village inn and the Indians that thronged the town. His companion during the night found he could not sleep in the building and fled to the coach which was outside. The pigs, according to Dickens, apparently thought that the coach was a huge bun and that its occupant was the meat filler, for they stood about and squealed all during the night. This not only drove away all desire for sleep but also imbued the Englishman with great fear. He was so chilled when he reentered the inn at daylight that several glasses of brandy were required to bring him back to normalcy.

The experiences of Colonel Crawford in the neighborhood which culminated in his being burned at the stake at a spot near the town are among the outstanding historical events. A monument has been erected near the spot and is each year visited by hundreds of people.

The population of Upper Sandusky at the present time is less than 4,000. As a town it has every facility for the convenience of its citizens. There are a goodly number of paved streets in the town. It is located on improved highways leading to the larger cities of the state. There are eight churches, seven of which require the services of a full time pastor. It has one of the most modern school systems of any village of its size in this section of the state.

It is difficult to visualize the completeness of the school facilities of the town without first visiting them. There are four buildings, namely Senior High, Junior High and two elementary grade buildings.

Senior High

The photograph above is of the Senior High building, a modern structure dedicated in 1924. It was erected at a cost of approximately $150,000 and is completely equipped in every detail. Special departments in the school include home economics, manual training and mechanical drawing, commercial course, agriculture, physics, chemistry.

The girls of the home economics class are given practical work as well as theoretical, the plan being carried out on a 5 to 1 schedule. The girls study for five weeks and on the sixth week in the school kitchen, prepare the noon day luncheon, served at a figure near cost to the students. The class is divided into different groups in order to keep both parts of the course functioning throughout the year. Differing from the majority of schools, where the noon luncheon system has been given a tryout, the Upper Sandusky class has made a financial success of the venture. Many of the foodstuffs are purchased at wholesale and the majority of the luncheon desserts are secured from the canned fruit supplies prepared by members of the class and kept in the school pantry. In addition to the cooking classes, the home economics course also maintains classes in sewing.

All indoor school activities are held in the combination gymnasium auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 800 when chairs are placed on the gym floor. Plate glass basketball bank boards, a motion picture machine and a completely equipped stage are features of the room.

There is also a library in the building with several hundred volumes of selected books for the use of the students.

Activities

Activities of the school include football, basketball, track, journalism, band, orchestra, dramatics and public speaking.

There are 865 students enrolled in the public schools, 230 being in the Senior High school and 250 in Junior High.

The citizens of Upper Sandusky take great pride in the fact that despite the recent building program and increased operating cost, the schools are entirely out of debt and have sufficient surplus of funds to meet any ordinary unforeseen expense.

Members of the school board are: Mrs. Peter Frank, president; Mrs. Charles Troup, vice president; Daniel Reynolds, clerk; John Schmidt; Charles Frederick.

The public school faculty is as follows: W. O. Moore, superintendent; Grace Slemmer, secretary. Elementary grades: Helen Reynolds, Kathryn McClain, Helen Roth, Murchie Castanien, Mrs. Gladys Crouse, Helen Gregg, Blanch Bower, Iva Miller, Kathryn Lasser, Marie Montgomery, Mabel Layton. Junior High: George Billing, principal; Lottie Howey, Frederick Fleeman, Addie Schoenberger, Gertrude Mittermaier, Ruth Gregg. Senior High: L. H. Houpt, principal; Erma Stearns, Dorothy Larcomb, C. E. Holland, D. F. McBene, Jean Golling, Mamie Stearns, T. R. Evans.

As Farm Center

Evidencing the potentiality that is Wyandot County's and Upper Sandusky's as a farming district and marketing center are the great strides to the front made in farmers' organization, poultry raising and livestock shipping. The Wyandot County Farm Bureau has a membership of nearly 5,000 and maintains offices in the county courthouse.

Last year, Wyandot County was named as the greatest poultry producing county in the state. Recognizing the fact that Ohio heads the list of all states in the Union in this line, citizens there claim that Wyandot County leads the nation. The baby chick hatcheries of Wyandot County have an estimated total yearly production of 1,000,000 chicks. Upper Sandusky has three hatcheries, one of which hatched 150,000 chicks alone last year. Wyandot County farmers formed the Wyandot Live Stock Co., a shipping organization, in 1921, with central headquarters located in Upper Sandusky. Shipments are made from all points in the county touched by railroads, under the management of A. T. Moser. Business of this organization from Dec. 1, 1925 to Oct. 1, 1926 amounted to $756,963.78.

The industrial life of Upper Sandusky might well be considered in its infancy. There are several small manufacturing concerns located there. The newest and one which bids fair to enjoy continual prosperity and expansion is the Warner Gear Co., engaged in making gear parts for automobiles. The plant recently started operations and now has about 30 men on the working force.

The Wyandot County courthouse is located in the center of the business district and is a large imposing stone structure. Headquarters of the Y. M. C. A. are maintained in the $30,000 modern "Y" building, one of the show-places of the village. The leading civic organizations of the community are the Kiwanis Club and the Upper Sandusky Chamber of Commerce, the last named being recently reorganized.

FATHER-SON BANQUET AT MORRAL SUCCESS

Annual Affair Held Under Auspices of Boy Scout Troop

Morral, Nov. 20—The Father-Son Banquet, held in the Morral School Auditorium, Thursday night, under the auspices of the Boy Scouts, led by Scoutmaster Porter, was a great success.

About thirty-five fathers and fifty sons were present.

Short addresses were given by Dr. Taylor, on science, Rev. Powell, with humor, Rev. Sloan, imitations, Mr. Bardon, thrift, Mr. Miller, limits, Mr. Bert Richardson, reading, Mr. Sprow, kindness. Paul Cline rendered two piano numbers, and many others contributed helpful suggestions for the boys.

The dinner was prepared by the Domestic Science girls, directed by the teacher, Miss Vanderwort.

During the first and second courses O. G. Morral, L. Young and Porter contributed two musical numbers.

EXPECTING 500 LEGIONNAIRES AT KENTON MEET

Invitations To Be Sent to All Posts in Northwestern Ohio

Kenton, Nov. 20—More than five hundred Legionnaires from posts in Northwestern Ohio are expected to attend the huge district meeting to be held here early in December under auspices of Kenton Post, No. 198.

Invitations to the various posts to participate will be placed in the mails as soon as a definite date is set.

Decision to arrange and sponsor the district affair, marking the opening of intensive member drives, was reached at a meeting of the local post last night and committees are now to be picked to have charge of the various details.

Efforts are to be made to secure Brig. Gen. John R. McQuigg, Cleveland, immediate past commander of the national organization, together with state and district officials, as speakers. In addition various stunts and entertainment features will be arranged for the visiting ex-soldiers.

The Ada Legion post has pledged its aid and co-operation and will, if suitable arrangements can be made, secure the Ohio Northern University band to appear in concert.

Preceding the program a banquet dinner will be served in the Hardin County armory.

William Loeffert, commander of Kenton post, Adjutant Ivan P. Smith and Kenneth Young, immediate past adjutant, are to direct the preliminaries.

Counties to be represented are: Allen, Marion, Logan, Union, Wyandot, and Hancock.

DISTRICT MEETING HELD AT KENTON M. E. CHURCH

Marion Man One of Speakers at Banquet Launching O. N. U. Drive

Kenton, Nov. 20—More than 150 people, representing the churches and the alumni of Ohio Northern University in the counties comprising the Delaware District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, attended the dinner meeting here Friday evening when preliminary steps were taken in launching the university's endowment fund drive.

Counties represented were: Hardin, Logan, Marion, Delaware, Union and Wyandot Counties.

Dr. Robinson G. Jones, superintendent of the Cleveland Public Schools, Lieut. Gov. Charles Lewis of Harpster, and Judge Grant Mouser, Marion, were the principal speakers. Dr. D. H. Bailey, vice president of Ohio Northern, was in charge of the program and gave a brief talk.

CLARIDON LADIES' AID MEETS AT CROUSE HOME

Claridon, Nov. 20—The Claridon Ladies' Aid met Thursday with Mrs. John Crouse. At noon a pot luck dinner was served. The day was spent piecing comfort blocks. The next meeting will be Dec. 2, at the home of Miss Minerva Devore. At that time a business meeting will be held.

Those present were Mrs. E. O. Haley, Mrs. Emmet Trout, Mrs. Edna Sutherland, Mrs. Wesley Rinker, Mrs. Lawrence Douce, Mrs. Sylvia Crouse, Mrs. I. N. Auld, Mrs. H. G. Kraner, Miss Minerva Devore, Mrs. Flora Irey, Mrs. F. H. Britton, Mrs. Ida Biedler, Mrs. A. Sykes, Mrs. P. W. Wittred, Mrs. J. W. SILVERCREEK MERCHANT IS ROBBER VICTIM

Believe Marauder One Well Acquainted with Habits of Store Owner

Kenton, Nov. 20—For the second time in less than two weeks, C. W. Robinson, Silvercreek merchant, has been the victim of robbers.

Entrance to the Robinson general store was gained by smashing the lock on the rear door. A small quantity of merchandise, including a hunting coat, sport shirt, underwear, socks and cigars, together with a small amount of money, were carried off.

Practically every article of merchandise in the large store was moved by the robber before locating a small leather bag in which the merchant had placed the receipts from the day's sales and hidden before locking up for the night.

Officials are working on the theory that the thief was someone familiar with the habits of Mr. Robinson. Since the first robbery several days ago, Mr. Robinson had been hiding his money away in bins containing feed. These had been opened and the contents scattered about.

Less than two weeks ago the Silvercreek merchant was held up at the point of a gun in the hands of a lone masked bandit, and forced to hand over $60 in cash and other valuables.

CLARIDON BASKETBALL TEAM MEMBERS CHOSEN

Claridon, Nov. 20—The Claridon Athletic Association chose their girls' basketball teams, Tuesday evening, at the Y. M. C. A. Two teams were selected. Those on the first team are as follows: Mildred Wilcox, center; Winifred Midlam and Frances Kraner, forwards, and Louise Williams and Mildred Cline, guards. Those on the second are: Dorothy Midlam, center; Georgia Miller and Lavon Collins, forwards; Gertrude Roth and Vana Collins, guards.

GALION MASONS ELECT NEW LODGE OFFICERS

Galion, Nov. 20—Galion Lodge No. 414, F. of A. M. elected as their officers for the coming year, John Holl, master; C. B. Monroe, senior warden; O. L. Hocker, junior warden; L. E. Place, treasurer; C. A. Koppee, secretary; C. K. Cunningham, senior deacon; and C. D. Molder, junior warden.

GALION KIWANIANS TO BE HOSTS AT MEETING

Galion, Nov. 20—Kiwanis clubs of Mt. Gilead, Marion, Mansfield and Crestline will be guests of the Galion club at a meeting here on Nov. 30. A dinner party at the Big Store will open the session and a clever program of stunts and surprises is being arranged. As a special speaker the Kiwanians will have Howard S. Smith of Dayton, governor elect of the Ohio district. The local committee is planning for an enjoyable evening and are hoping for number of the neighboring clubmen to accept the invitation.

SYSTEMATIC SURVEY OF EX-SERVICE MAN PLANNED

Kenton, Nov. 20—A systematic survey to determine the number of ex-service men in Hardin County, their names, addresses and outfits with which they served during the World War, may be launched within the near future as the result of recommendations offered by Dr. P. E. Decatur of this city.

Under suggested plans, school children throughout the county would be called upon to assist in listing the ex-soldiers.

"Such a roster," Dr. Decatur pointed out, "would be of inestimable value to the Legion officials in member drives or in promoting some Legion undertaking."

ACCIDENT MARS GLAMOUR OF FOOTBALL GAME

Granville Player Dies Soon After Receiving Injuries in Game

Marysville, Nov. 20—Tragedy yesterday called a halt to the Central Ohio Class B high school championship football clash between Marysville and Granville on the latter's field.

The hand of death stretched across the grid battlefield when Watson Rogers, 16, star half back of the Granville warriors, was fatally injured by a blow in the abdomen while tackling a Marysville line plunger early in the game. Rogers died a few minutes later in a Granville hospital and the game was called at the end of the half when the tragic news reached the field.

According to medical authorities, it is probable that Rogers, a senior in Granville High, had a defective heart and the blow caused a paralytic condition which resulted in his death.

Much doubt is expressed as to whether or not a spark of life remained in the injured player as he was carried off the field by his teammates. First aid was given by attendants on the field and later physicians used every knack of medical science to revive the youth.

The accident cast a pallor of gloom and depression over members of both teams and all who witnessed the fatal play. Immediately upon arriving in Marysville, Coach Gerald Kingsmore cancelled the remaining game on the Marysville schedule which was to have been played Thanksgiving Day with Mt. Sterling as the opponent.

All members of the local squad were exonerated of any unnecessary roughness and any blame for the accident, which occurred after Granville had twice crossed the Marysville goal line. When the news of young Rogers' death was received, Marysville was within five yards of the Granville goal. The game was called with the score being given as 0 to 0.

The game brings to a close the most successful football season ever recorded in the athletic history of Marysville High. The local team suffered only one defeat in a series of eight games.

MARYSVILLE RESIDENT DIES OF COMPLICATIONS

Funeral Services for George Renner To Be Held Sunday

Marysville, Nov. 20—George Renner, one of Marysville's oldest and best known residents, passed away at 7:45 Friday morning at his home in this city of a complication of diseases and old age. He had been failing in strength for about a year and had been bedfast since August.

Renner, who was 82 years of age, was a native of Germany, being born February 20, 1844, in the village of Dedenorf. His parents were John and Elizabeth Renner, with whom he came to this country at the age of six years. The family located near Columbus.

On April 20, 1871, the deceased was married to Miss Magdalena Scheiderer, a native of Darby township and to this union eight children were born, one of them is deceased. Those surviving are as follows: Casper and Fred Renner, and Mrs. George Vollrath, residing in the Darby Plains; Peter Renner and Mrs. Charles Rausch, residing southeast of Marysville; Miss Mary Renner, who made her home with her father; and Rev. Otto Renner, whose residence is in the state of Illinois. One sister, Mrs. John Keerner, of near Columbus, also survives.

After his marriage, Mr. Renner engaged in farming as a livelihood in which occupation he was quite successful. Seventeen years ago he and his wife, who passed away three years ago, moved to Marysville, since which time he has led a retired life. He had been a member of the Lutheran Church all his life.

Funeral services will be held at St. John's Lutheran Church, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, preceded by short services in the home, conducted by Rev. H. C. Kuechle. Burial will be made in St. John's cemetery, south of Marysville, in charge of L. H. Miller.

Iberia News

Iberia, Nov. 20—Mr. and Mrs. Bush Carter and son, Eugene, were dinner guests of Mrs. Carter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burkhart, Tuesday.

Mrs. Herbert Cross and Mrs. Emory Kelly, both of Galion, spent Tuesday with their mother, Mrs. Henry Zimmerman.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Craley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roesch and little daughter, Maxine, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Craley and Adam Crider were six o'clock dinner guests at the Methodist parsonage, Tuesday.

Mrs. Henry Zimmerman spent Thursday with her daughters, Mrs. Herbert Cross and Mrs. Emory Kelly of Galion.

Mrs. Rosa Mead spent Thursday at the Galion hospital, at the bedside of Miss Rosa Bell Northrupp. Miss Florence Lloyd, a teacher in the Iberia school, also called to see Miss Northrupp.

Mrs. J. H. Morrison and her niece, Miss Thelma Danner, of Brush Ridge, were callers at the Methodist parsonage, Wednesday afternoon.

GALION BANK GETS BONDS

Galion, Nov. 20—The finance committee of the city council held a special meeting Wednesday evening and as a result awarded the $11,000 bond issue fro street assessments to the Citizens National bank of this city. The local bank's bid was for $1,329.00.

RABBIT HUNTERS SHOOT RED FOX

Kenton, Nov. 20—Carl Patton and a party of men hunting rabbits on the Hartley Phillips farm, near here, bagged a large red fox instead.

As the small band of hunters took to the fields they deployed in a half circle that none of the cotton tails would escape their attention. Coming out of the woods the men were startled to see a large fox dart across the clearing.

The dead animal was displayed before the pupils in the Belle Center school and later skinned, the pelt selling for nine dollars.

Presence of the fox is believed by farmers to account for the mysterious disappearance of their fowls in large numbers.

LARUE GRIDMEN MEET DEFEAT AT RICHWOOD

Hard Fought Game Won by Try-for-Point Goal

Richwood, Nov. 20—Richwood adds another victory, when they defeated the strong LaRue eleven 7-6 in a very hard fought game Friday afternoon. The major part of the game was played in falling snow.

The Richwood team scored first from a 60 yard end run, Carleton Phelps, the stellar full back carrying the ball over; LeMasters added the extra point.

Behind Perfect Interference

Richwood had the ball in LaRue territory all of the first half. The half ended with the ball on LaRue's 20 yard line.

The third quarter Richwood worked the ball down to LaRue's 20 yard line, where a LaRue man intercepted Allen's pass, running back 70 yards to the five yard line, where "Bill" Sloop caught him from the rear. Richwood then played air tight football, holding for four straight downs. Richwood took the ball on the five yard line and punted 25 yards to LaRue. On the next play LaRue passed for the other score, but failed to make extra point.

The game from there on was a punting duel, Richwood having a little advantage. The game ended with the ball on Richwood's 40 yard line. Richwood counted 15 first downs to eight of LaRue's.

Lineup for Richwood: re, R. Bristley; rt, V. Bristley; rg, R. Bell; c, Swartz; lg, Williams; lt, LeMasters; le, Hunt; qb, Grimes; lh, Allen; fb, Phelps; rh, Sloop (c).

There was but one substitution made during the whole game in Richwood's team, and that was Temple for R. Bristley.

The Richwood boys have been promised a banquet if they win Raymond game on Thanksgiving morning.

LAST OF CRAWFORD POINEERS SUCCUMBS

End Comes To Joseph Walters, 94, At Home of Daughter

Galion, Nov. 20—Joseph Walters, the last of the Crawford county pioneers, died Wednesday morning, at the home of a daughter, Mrs. David Rader, in Richland county.

Walters who is 94 years old has been a lifelong resident of Crawford county and remembered many incidents that occurred when Galion was little more than a crossroads. For many years he was an active farmer and was well known throughout the community. Only during the last few months has he been in ill health and during that time had made his home with his daughter. Walters is believed to have been the oldest resident of the county.

EXPLOSION OF LANTERN CAUSE OF FARM BLAZE

Loss on Old Sutermeister Farm Estimated at Near $14,000

Mt. Victory, Nov. 20—Fire caused by the explosion of a lantern early this morning completely destroyed the large house and barn on what is known as the old Sutermeister Farm, two miles south of here, now owned by A. M. Skidmore. The loss was estimated today at near $14,000.

Skidmore was carrying the lantern at the time of the explosion and the drops of the fluid flames struck him and caused painful burns on his face and damaged his clothing.

Horses and cattle in the barn were rescued. Skidmore also drove the family automobile from the burning structure before it was damaged. The hay laden mows caught fire almost immediately placing the blaze beyond all possible control.

Sparks from the barn set the house roof afire and a rising wind served to feed the flames. The Mt. Victory Fire Department was summoned to the scene but arrived too late for effective work.

Skidmore was doing the morning chores at an earlier hour than usual as the family was preparing to leave this morning for West Mansfield to attend the funeral of Mrs. Skidmore's father, M. C. Fry.

FARM CLUB TO STUDY SWINE MANAGEMENT

Green Camp Organization Holds Election of Officers at First Meet of Year

Green Camp, Nov. 20—The first meeting of the Green Camp Young Men's Farming Club was held at the Green Camp school building last Wednesday night. Seventeen young men were in attendance.

The purpose of the meeting was to organize the club and select the subject to be studied in the short course this winter.

Swine management was selected as the topic for short course work. It was decided that the short course work would be open to any farmers that were interested as well as members of the club. Regular meetings will begin Tuesday, Dec. 14 and will be held each Tuesday night thereafter excepting the last Tuesday of the month which reserved for the monthly meeting of the club. J. F. Johnson, instructor of national agriculture will be in charge of the work.

The following officers were elected: President, Raymond Dreyer; vice president, Clyde Beaver; secretary, Raymond Bentley; treasurer, J. F. Johnson; manager of athletics, Sperry Long; chief musician, Milton Ruth; reporter, Forest Rush; sargent at arms, Herbert McNeal.

Final arrangements were made for the corn husking contest to be held Saturday night, Nov. 20 in connections with the Green Camp community fair.

After the meeting the boys played several games of volley ball and enjoyed some refreshments.

IBERIA SCHOOL GIRL DIES AT GALION HOSPTAL

Funeral Services To Be Held Sunday at Methodist Church

Galion, Nov. 20—Rosa Belle Northrup, twelve-year-old Iberia school girl, died at two o'clock Friday morning in the Good Samaritan hospital, following an operation for appendicitis which she underwent late Wednesday night. Neither of the girl's parents were at home when she was suddenly taken ill Wednesday afternoon but were at her bedside when she died.

The body was taken to the Dillon and Glass funeral home and removed to the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Northrup at Iberia tonight. Services will be held Sunday afternoon at the Iberia Methodist church in charge of Rev. Fisher and burial will be made in the cemetery there. Surviving are the parents and six sisters, Mrs. Frank Smothers of Mt. Liberty and Mrs. Allen Douglas, Misses Edith, Esther, Ethel and Anna Marie, all of Iberia.

BOOK INTEREST SHOWS INCREASE THIS MONTH

Bucyrus, Nov. 20—As a result of the increased interest in books since book week and educational week just observed by the library and schools in the city, Bucyrus Public Library has issued 1,700 volumes since Nov. 1. This is a record breaking number of books to be issued in that length of time. As a general average for a month is 2,500, November will far exceed this. Miss Grace Fuller is librarian and during book week, all the grade school pupils were invited to the library for inspection and a talk.

TO IMPROVE BEVERAGES

After use, coffee and tea pots should be rinsed in cold water and washed with clear hot water. Then they should be scalded with boiling water, wiped dry, and aired thoroughly.

BABY MUMS in pastel tints added a touch of color to the tea tables arranged in the ballroom at Hotel Harding, where Mr. Bolander was heard in an interesting talk on "The Magic of Block Printing and Tendencies Toward Modern Art," last night following the Art Club tea. His theme urged the necessity of creating more interest in teachers and younger pupils of the schools in the country in modern art. The guests later had an opportunity of viewing a very fine exhibit of beautiful examples of domestic and foreign block printing. Mr. Bolander is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bolander, S. Prospect-st, and is the director of art in the School of Fine Arts, Columbus.

The guests were received by Mrs. Carl W. Leffler, president of the club, and preceding the talk by Mr. Bolander, were delightfully entertained with a group of vocal numbers, by Mrs. Fred N. Rankin, of Akron, formerly Miss Grace Bain of this city, and sister of Mrs. Leffler. Mrs. Rankin sang "When Lovers Meet," Carene, "Cool by My Lavender," German, and "Homing," Del Regio.

Absent-Mindedness
Kind Postal Workers
Hair—Long and Short

BY EDNA DUTTON

IT'S a hustling, bustling old world and it goes without telling if you don't hustle and bustle with it you're soon out of the running. It's trot here and hop-skoch there for this, that and the other and sometimes we hurry so fast we forget just one little detail and our whole purpose is defeated. Now that I have bore that to a breathless public will back up my statement by the U. S. government. I chanced on the following on a postal card waiting for an address in the postoffice this week: Dear Mother—Suppose you wonder whether I am among the living. Have been doing so many different things can scarcely get time for any writing. You will have to come and see what keeps me busy. We are all very well and very much occupied. A letter soon, I hope. G...... Tues. I hope that ere this the letter has gone, addressed, stamped and everything for the postal card no doubt will soon be on its merry way to the dead letter office where it will officialy be declared lost because of no address.

DO you happen to have a canine that is A. W. O. L., for an afternoon or even a whole day during a week and you can't for the life of you tell what woos him from his fireside? It can't be the lure of wanderlust for he doesn't stay away long enough to recover from even a mild attack of that and he isn't to be found anywhere along the street. If he disappears shortly after the mailman has made his round, there is just one place to look for him and that's the postoffice. Peer into the window any day and you will find anywhere from two to four hounds parked in the office, just more than enjoying themselves. They follow the mailmen in from the four corners of the city. They seem to have a penchant for a uniform and the excitement of seeing the mail come and go. It is learned upon making a little enquiry that some of the dogs are regular visitors at the office and no matter if their particular pal of a mailman is off duty they hang around for as much as a good half day. They are treated most kindly and are given a "set up" of a pan of water by way of welcome.

JUST when we get all set to feeling unabashed in a barber chair, and our locks shorn to suit our own particular style of beauty along comes those devotees of Minerva at Vassar and declare for a return of woman's crowning glory, long silken braids or short rippling, romping ringlets whichever happens to be your lot. The word comes straight from Poughkeepsie, they are beating a retreat just as fast as mother nature will permit. Of course the situation hasn't become serious but it's bound to be an issue sooner or later so it might be well to start early to think things over. Drag out a few of the old photographs if necessary and see just how you looked only a few months ago. Of course there are those who avow they will always cling to the mannish cut but the back to the braid cry is farflung and loud.

The next meeting will be held with the teacher, Mrs. Melvin Bechtle, Wilson-av, in two weeks.

PRESBYTERIAN CLASS MEMBERS ENTERTAINED

Members of Mrs. Friel's Sunday School Class, First Presbyterian Church, were entertained by the teacher, Mrs. C. E. Friel at her home, Nunin-ct, Thursday night. Letters were read from several members of the class who are out of the city. In a contest honors were awarded Miss Velma Bibler, Miss Lodema Chamberlain, Mrs. L. Snyder and Mrs. Fred Miller. Plans were made for a Christmas exchange party early next month at the home of Theresa Askew, Windsor-st, with Miss Eloise Bauer as assistant hostess. Refreshments were served.

TRINITY BAPTIST CLASS OFFICERS ANNOUNCED

The following officers will preside in the C. R. C. Class, Trinity Baptist Sunday School: Hardin Jones, president; Mrs. B. E. Bindley, vice president; Mrs. Horace Jones, secretary; Mrs. Floyd Benson, assistant secretary; Floyd Benson, treasurer; Mrs. L. D. Rhoads, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Florence Brannon, social chairman. The election took place at a meeting held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ridgal Albert, Green Camp. In a contest honors were awarded Mrs. L. D. Rhoads and Mr. Brannon. Refreshments were served.

HEAD OF EPWORTH M. E. CHURCH BODY RESIGNS

Mrs. Charles Aikin, who recently accepted the presidency of the Foreign Missionary Society, Epworth M. E. Church, resigned her position as leader of the Standard Bearer Society, Epworth M. E. Church, at a meeting of the society last night at the home of Miss Elizabeth Poe, Cherry-st. Mrs. Aikin was presented a gift by the class. Miss Esther Williams read from the lesson study book, "Gale Hollister's Heritage" after which Miss Mildred Uhl entertained with several piano selections. Devotionals were in charge of Mrs. B. L. George, wife of the pastor of the church. Miss Evelyn Long assisted the hostess in serving refreshments during the social hour. The next meeting will be held Dec. 16 at the home of Miss Zelma Schwienfurth, S. Grand-av.

WAYSIDE LOYAL CIRCLE HOLDS ALL-DAY MEETING

An all-day meeting was held by members of Wayside Loyal Circle, Rose Rebekah Lodge, yesterday in Odd Fellows' Hall with good attendance. Mrs. Kate Parish entertained with several readings and Mrs. Dennis Gompf with a number of piano selections. Mrs. Elizabeth Bratton received the contest award. During a business session plans were made for a Christams exchange at the meeting to be held Dec. 17 in the Hall. The next regular meeting will be held Dec. 3 at the home of Mrs. H. O. Robinson, 587 Cherry-st.

FIRST REFORMED CHURCH TO CONCLUDE PROGRAM

Special services concluding the building fund campaign for this year will be held during the Sunday School hour tomorrow at the First Reformed Church. The services will be under the direction of Asa Queen as general manager, assisted by members of 18 teams.

At the church services special recognition will be made of family day. All members of every family in the congregation are expected to attend the service and occupy the same pew. A sermon in keeping with the occasion will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. Herbert F. Weckmueller, who also will preach the 10th of a series of sermons on "The Apostles," at the services Sunday night.

Will Rogers Writes of Three Old Friends Passed On

Public Loses Characters of Renown

Stage Fakir, Cowboy Painter and Woman Sharpshooter Answer Call

BY WILL ROGERS

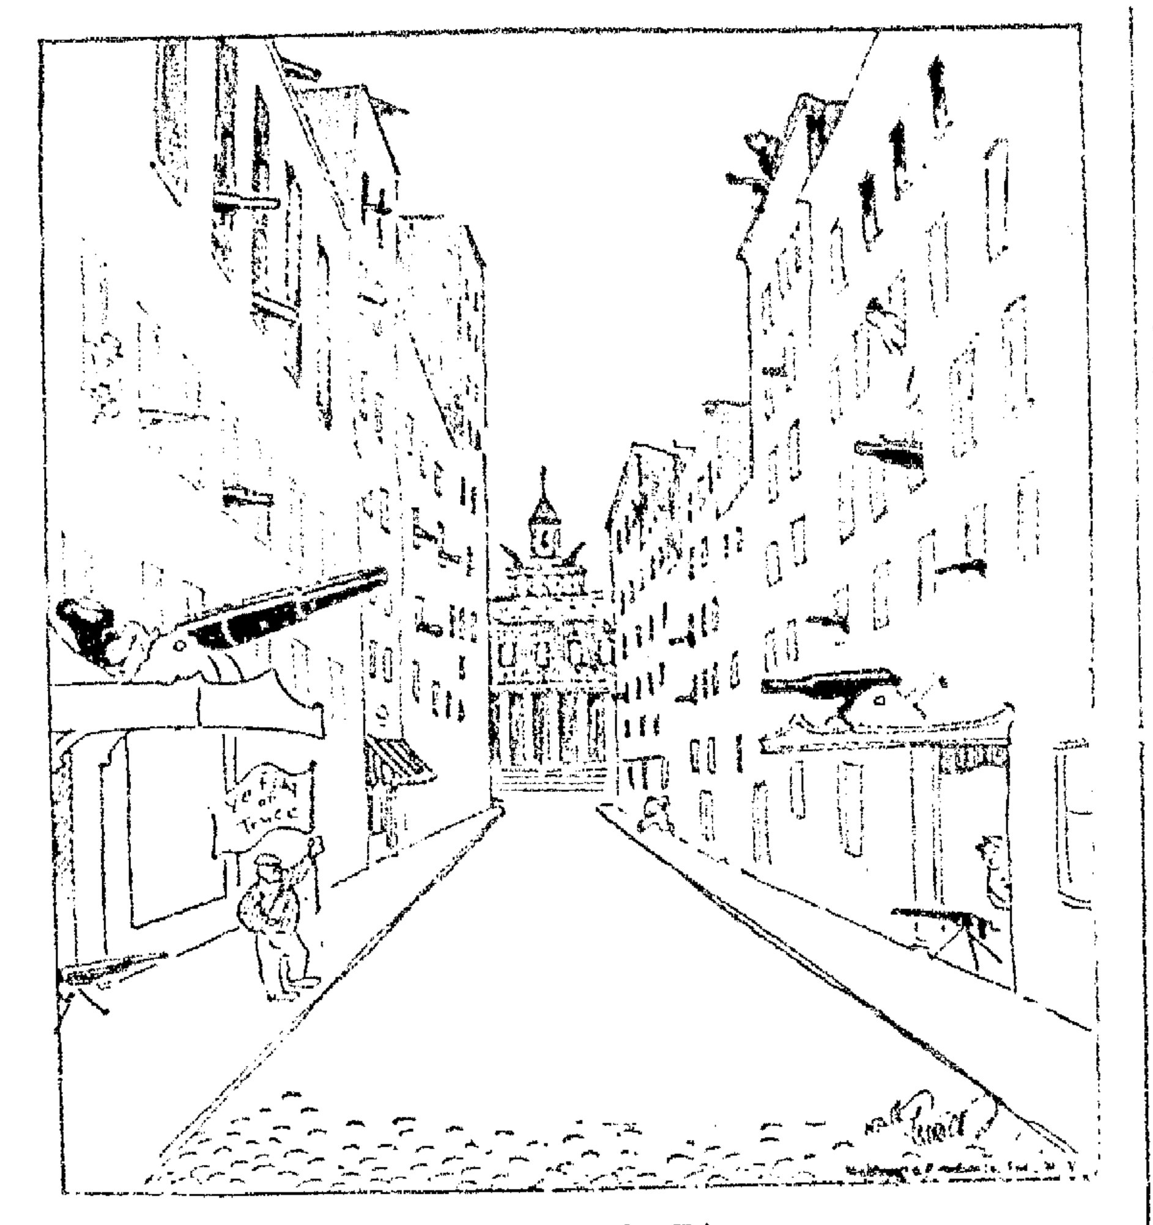
A lot of a half breed nonsense letter is not exactly the place you would look for obituary notices is it? I guess they don't belong here, but three National Characters passed about the same time and you seemed to have had a fairly close acquaintanceship with all of them over a period of many years, wh ywhat do you say we just lay off Mr. Coolidge and his prosperity program which prospers everywhere but at the poles, also the wet and the dry perpetual motion question. Aimee and her kidnapping or kidnapping. Peaches has soured on the public, and we will be able to [illegible]. Dawes is peeking his head over the Presidential horizon in a sort of menacing way. Vare and Smith have jobs which they will never be able to work at. The big Berthas and machine guns of Chicago streets have called a truce in no man's land for a few days. New Jersey is trying a murder case four years after they knew who did it. Poor Marie just as well be touring Roumania as far as the publicity is concerned.

Three Old Friends

All these above mentioned are subjects that there is a possibility of digging some humor out of without any great amount of effort, but they can rest (in fact I wish some of them would rest). It's of three old friends that I want to write you about. No three people in any three lines you can mention to me today stood out as prominently as these three did during their respective careers. They absolutely stood alone in their lines. The sudden and unexpected death of Harry Houdini received far the most publicity in the public press, and well it should, for he had been a good friend to the Press. He had furnished hundreds and hundreds of columns to every newspaper in the land. He had risked his life many times to make news for readers. He was always in on any stunt that they might concoct in their various towns. In my little career of several years meeting about everyone that ever was connected with a dressing room, or a stage door we have learned to give credit to what we call a real showman. Everyone in any line of the theatrical business is always spoken of as a "Showman." Well what constitutes one is a man that can sell himself to the public in the very best way possible.

Houdini

Houdini was the greatest Showman of our time by far. A great many are good and call themselves fairly well but they will generally lack something, and if you figure it out it's ability. Well Houdini never lacked ability. No person appearing on an American stage ever had any more license to be there than Harry Houdini. I played with Harry, at Keith's Philadelphia over 18 years ago for the first time. I was roping at my Pony on the stage and was billed to close the show, (that is, go on last.) Harry was just ahead with his handcuff tricks. It was late when he went on. He held that audience for one and a quarter. Not a soul moved. He would come out of his cabinet every fifteen or 20 minutes perspiring and kinder size up that crowd to see just about how they were standing it. Now, mind you when he is in that cabinet there is not a thing going on. A whole Theatre full are just waiting. The City Police had put these cuffs on him. Now he had that something that no one can define that is generally just passed off under the heading of showmanship. But it was in reality, Sense, Shrewdness, Judgement, Unmatched Ability, Intuition, Personality, and an uncanny knowledge of people. Say, when he had finished I just as well got on my little old Pony and rode back to the livery Stable as to have rode out on that stage. When I got my little act started the night watchman was just locking up the front door. That as I say was 18 or 20 years ago (I am ashamed to say which) and he could have done the same thing the week before he died. All those years and Harry could fool 'em. You can't do that on nothing, and the great par of it was he always told 'em he was fooling 'em.



They've called a truce in Chicago

Team Work

We played on the same Bill many times in later years and he even helped me on a Burlesque in kidding his act, when I had to follow him. We have been friends all these years and he sent me the first of his books after being printed. He was a fine type of man, Houdini was. He did a world of good in detecting bunk and exposing it. He relied on cleverness and not superstition to get him by, with as many fake things as is being perpetrated on the people nowadays under the Spiritual, why Houdini will certainly be missed.

Charles M. Russell

Almost at the same time we read of the death of Charles M. Russell, the Great Cowboy Painter, of Great Falls, Montana. He was the greatest Artist the west has ever produced. Charley was a Cowpuncher. He was a cowpuncher at heart. He didn't go there to study the west, just to paint it. He loved it, lived it, and painted it because he loved it. An old $60 a month Cowpuncher lived to see his paintings bring as high as $15,000 and now there is no telling what they will bring. He is just starting in to be great now. To have known Charley and just sit down and listen to him was the greatest remembrance of anyone's life who had had that pleasure. I never met a person yet that ever heard him that didn't say he was the greatest story teller they ever listened to. If he could have just sit on the stage and told his stories, most of his own experiences up in Montana in the days gone by, why he would have been as big a success as he was as an Artist. No matter at what party and who was present, why no one would dare take up a minute of the time with any of their stories. It was always Charley that everyone was wanting to hear. And when he would come to our house out in California as he used to quite often he and Mrs. Russell, why even our kids would just look forward to it, for they wouldent miss a word of anything.

Every Detail

I loved his paintings; could sit by the hour and look at one and marvel at the exact detail, every piece of rope, every saddle string, every hair on the horse laying just the way it should, and every painting had a touch of humor in them. I loved them and liked to see 'em, but it was the man himself that you will always remember even more than his work. Everybody was great with Charley! no criticism for anyone. The best way to judge just how good a man is is to find out how he stands around his home and among his kind of people. Well he was the Cowpunchers' Painter. They swore by Russell. The Cattle country knew if it was a Russell it was right, and they loved him personally. Montana was for Charley and well they should have been, for he was the greatest thing that State ever turned out. They say that Art in America lost a great Artist. I don't know nothing about Art. But I know that Cowpunchers lost our most unique character and friend.

Annie Oakley

Annie Oakley was the third. The older generation knew more of her. She perhaps in her day stood far more preeminent in her profession than either Houdini or Russell. She was the acknowledged headliner for years and years of the great Buffalo Bill Show, the best known Woman in the World at one time, as when she was with the show it toured everywhere. She was not only the greatest rifle shot for a woman that ever lived, but I doubt if her character could be matched outside of some Saint. She and her fine husband were great friends of Fred Stone and family and I first become acquainted with her there, years ago.

They Loved Her

I had heard Cowboys who had traveled with the Buffalo Bill Show speak of her in almost reverence. They loved her. She was a marvelous woman, kindest hearted, most thoughtful, a wonderful Christian woman. I went out to see her last spring in Dayton. She was in bed; had been for months, but she was just as cheerful. I told her I would see her this fall when I come back and tried to cheer her up in the usual dumb way we have to do those things. She said I wouldent. She says, "But I will meet you." Well, she will certainly keep her end of the bargain. Just think of a little frail gray-haired woman who had spent her life with a wild west show, remaining in your memory as being just about the most perfect thing you ever saw beside your own Mother.

One was a Faker on the stage. One was a Cowpuncher. One was the greatest single attraction the outdoor show World has ever produced, yet they all lived so that their personal lives as well as their Professional ones will remain an everlasting credit to their various professions. So it's what you are and not what you are in that makes you.

Roberta Risks It

BY MARGARET CAMERON

CHAPTER FIFTY-SEVEN

Roberta was talking, quietly. "That's what I mean. There wasn't anything personal in it. You just saw something big to do and did it. I've known that all along, and—I'm sorry I teased you, Peter. I wouldn't, if I'd known. I didn't mean to hurt you."

"Hurt me?" He had forgotten her part in the late encounter.

"About—your name, you know."

"Oh!" Color flooded his face, which had been as pale as hers. "Oh, that's all right. My fault entirely. Forget it."

"I will. I'll always think of you as Peter."

This was a little more than Piggy could bear, and, to escape one agony, he inflicted worse upon himself, in his need of defense against self-betrayal.

"Is—Nixon here?"

"Clif? Oh, no! He's never to know anything about you. Nobody it. But I met him today, accidentally, and he's coming down to New York to see me tomorrow night."

"Oh!" said Piggy politely. "You'll be married right away, I suppose?"

"That's another thing." She spoke hurriedly, embarrassment written in every lineament. "I owe you a lot of money, and this morning your father made me take more. I meant to ask Clif to pay it all—afterward. But I'm afraid you'll have to wait now. Until—until I can earn it I'm not going to be married."

"What."

She hung her head. "No, I—I can't. I thought I could. I tried, but—I'm sorry; you'll have to wait."

He made no answer, but he took a step toward her, audibly catching his breath, and she looked up at him. In the next instant she was swept into his arms, his lips upon hers.

"Oh, Bob! I thought I'd lost you," he whispered, between kisses.

"Why—why, Peter!" she gasped, when he would allow her. "Do you care, too?"

"Care! I've cared from the first minute. What do you think I chased off with you for? Think I make a habit of running away with girls? Care! Why, Bob, I've been the most miserable devil——"

That was as far as he could go without further solace from her assuaging lips and repeated assurance that despite his manifest unworthiness she loved him.

"Not going to be married, aren't you?" he chuckled during the next comparatively sane interlude. "You'll be Mrs. Percival Galahad Brazenose tomorrow. How'll you like that on your visiting cards?"

She protested that the morrow would be too soon, mentioned that she had many things to do, and asked what apparent irrelevance whether he thought they'd ever find her trunks.

"Trunks? What have your trunks to do with it?"

"My clothes, Peter!"

"Rats! Piggy was himself again. "Think I'm going to marry you in anything except that brown rig you have on? Suits me, all right. I'm not going to let you go again—no farther than the end of my arm. You would run away from me, would you? Well, I'll show you! The first thing we do in New York will be to find a parson and tie you tight!"

"But Clif thinks we're still engaged. He's coming to see me tomorrow night."

"He'll find the fair Ellen is Lochinvar's bride. Write him a note to that effect——or send some girl you never saw before to tell him! Poor old Whangdoodle!" Piggy felt an honest pang of sympathy for the unfortunate Nixon, though in his heart of hearts he believed that Wangdoodles were born, not made, and no more to be transmogrified than the leopard or the Ethiope. "He's had his chance and lost it."

thiks n tTadwyfys-t Ko.hrh?tzzz 6

A discreet tap at the dor drove them apart.

"Come in," said Roberta, and then, audaciously: "Oh—it's dad."

"Wha-at?" The elder Brazenose looked from one to the other.

"Sure!" Piggy grinned and gathered her again in an arm flung around her shoulders. "Who says I ain't an obedient boy? You told me to marry her, and I'm going to—tomorrow."

"You'll do," said his father. Then he kissed his new daughter.

At this point dinner was served. Celia limped in from an adjoining room, to be astounded by the latest development, and they sent for Janet, whose burden of remorse ceased to be. Some time later they calmed down sufficiently to supply, between them, a detailed account of the days proceedings.

"I found out one thing that I'll never forget." Roberta said mischievously. "Dad may growl sometimes, Peter, but inside he's just like us. You ought to have seen his eyes this morning when he was planning my raid on Birchwood."

"Oh—sure." Brazenose agreed, with a grin only less boyish than his son's. "We're three bears when we get started. Big bear, little bear—I'm the in-between bear."

"And the one who's sure to get squeezed." The Little bear's face clouded. "We can't be married very soon, Peter, because if we are father's sure to spot you instantly, and he'll take it out on dad—who has trouble enough with him now."

"Don't let that stand in your way, my dear." The older man kissed her hand, bringing a brighter color to her face. "We're considering life now, not property."

She shook her head, twinkling back at him. "Not to that extent. There is such a thing as proportion, you know—balance. And you've done so much for Peter and me, you must let us do our share. Besides, it may take me some time to make arrangements for Celia. We'll wait six months—"

"Six months!" Piggy roared.

"Janet and I will look out for Celia. You'll be married tomorrow—quietly. I'll see to that. Then you'll take this young man away and sequester him somewhere out of sight until his hair grows. He can't come into my offices wearing that mane. Perhaps by the time you get back and the marriage is announced, I'll have found another threader and can tell Scott to go to hell—begging your pardon, girls."

"By the way, how did you come out with Killigrew?" Piggy asked.

"Didn't see him. Got caught in a cyclone." His father smiled at Roberta, who inquired:

"Who's Killigrew?"

They told her about the henminded inventor, clucking over his unfledged chick and when she had grasped the situation she said:

"Why, that's simple! We'll be married tomorrow, Peter, and go straight to Boston. You can make that man sell his thing to dad."

Brazenose snorted, quite in his normal manner. "He make him! Killigrew's a man-size job, young lady. I worked with him for months, myself," and never made a dent in him. P. G. could no more—"

"Oh, la, la!" said Roberta, with a rougish glance.

Checked, he took thought for an instant and then leaned toward her argumentatively, laughter in his eyes.

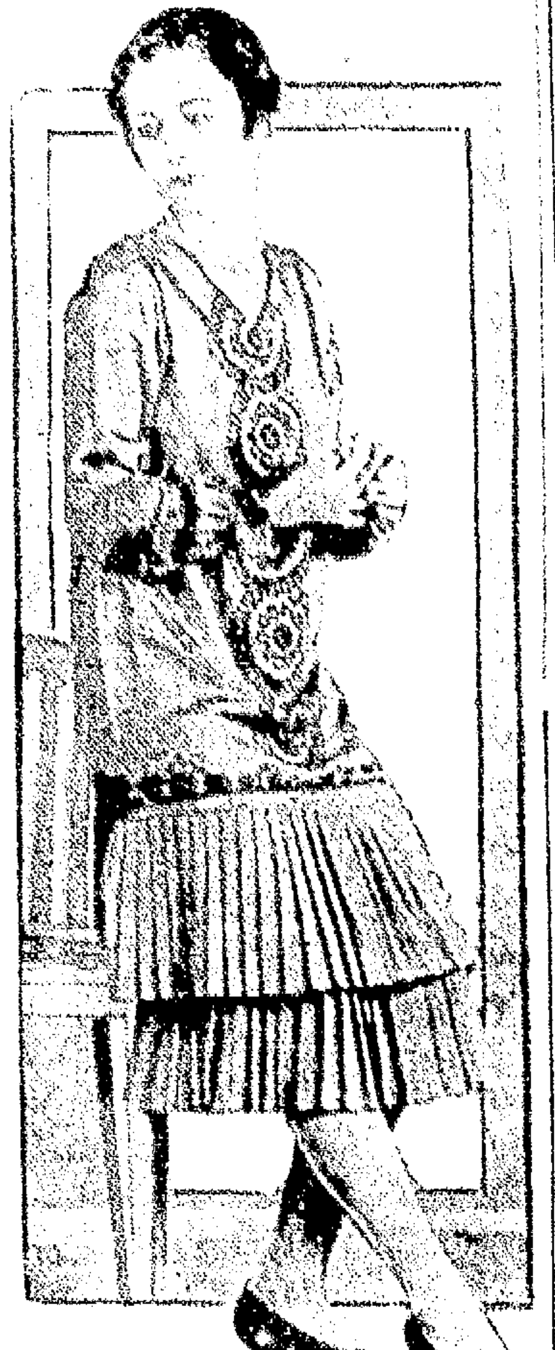
"I'll bet you thousand dollars to a nickel that P. G. can't buy that machine."

"Done!" she cried. "He'll do it."

He did.

THE END

AFTERNOON FROCKS SHOW WIDE RANGE IN NEW STYLES



The afternoon frock may be the simplest of creations or the most elaborate. It may be a plainly made flannel or serge or the richest silk or velvet. It may be little more than a house dress or it may be almost indistinguishable from an evening frock. What might be called an intermediate model is pictured. It is an imported frock of silk and serge in two piece styling. The skirt section has two pleated ruffles and the silk blouse has a heavily embroidered motif down the front and edging blouse and sleeves. The sleeves and collar are conservative. Black velvet gowns for afternoon are favored by many women, as they are appropriate for many occasions.

ERMINE WRAPS

The wrap of ermine for evening wear is shown in several new versions, one of which is a full length cape made entirely of flat tucks of the fur. A high bolster collar rises above a deep yoke.

Suggestions and Recipes Given Here For All Three Meals

THIS dinner menu might be used for a Sunday or "company" diner or for Thanksgiving. One does not have to eat poultry on Thanksgiving day, you know. Wild fowl was more easily obtained in colonial days than domestic meat, it is surmised, so that is one reason for associating fowls with that day—wild turkey and wild goose being shot for the occasion.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Heavenly Hash — One-half pound marshmallows cut in pieces, one small can pinapple cut in small pieces, one banana, one California orange, one-half pint whipping cream. Add marshmallows to pincapple and let sit for one hour, then add orange cut in pieces, banana sliced and cream well whipped—let stand another hour before serving. Top each serving with maraschino cherry. (This will serve six liberally). But can be kept for next day if not used.

Rice Fritters—Take cold boiled rice and break in eggs, according to amount of rice used, season with salt and pepper, drop by spoonfuls into hot fat, butter while hot and serve.

Quicksands of Love

BY ADELE GARRISON

I FOUND Mary sound asleep when I made my second trip to the third floor, ostensibly to visit Junior, but in reality to assure myself that Dicky's tempestuous young niece had put out her light, and that the two corridor doors of her room were securely bolted.

But it was a long time before any sign of slumber came to my own pillow, for I was sorely troubled about Mary. Over and over I considered my fears for her—fears at first vague which had been growing with the weeks until now they were well defined apprehensions.

Back of them all was the conviction which Lillian and I shared that Philip Veritzen's rigid regime, almost inhuman when applied to a girl so young and full of temperament and tempestuous joy of life as Mary Harrison, was an unwise thing, with great possibilities of danger both to the young girl and the plans of the great producer for her future.

Curbing her natural inclinations this was like holding down tightly the cover of a steam boiler, and I greatly feared that Mary's temperament—and temper—were dangerously near an explosion.

Jack Leslie's Shadow

The possibility of this was bad enough in itself without its being complicated by the sinister figure of Jack Leslie, who, I was certain, must be counted as menacing possibility in the young girl's life, although he appeared to have dropped out of it. But physically I was aware of the cabaret dancer's interest in Dicky's niece and his determination to carry on the acquaintance he already had begun with her.

Less threatening, but still a source of distinct uneasiness to me was the odd association of the young girl with the queer lodger on the fouth floor. Since my first experience with Mrs. Baker, and her attempts to spy upon my actions, I had distrusted her. Always, too, there was in the back of my brain the vague impression that she was not what she seemed, and that somewhere I had known her, unpleasantly.

If only I had some genuine interest, some young associate whom I could introduce into Mary's life, to offset these sinister influences. Persistently there came before me the image of young Noel Veritzen. It was not the first time that I had wished I could bring about a meeting between my husband's gifted niece and the brilliant but unhappy and disowned son of Philip Veritzen. It was a fantastic idea and why it had com to me, I did not know, save that I was sure the two young things had temperaments, tastes and ideas which would attract each other.

But my position in Philip Veritzen's official family, together with my knowledge of the estrangement betwen him and his son, made it impossible for me to take any initiative in bringing him into Mary's life, and it was with a feeling of impotence to help the child in any otherway than by guarding her vigilantly as Katherine and I had planned, that finally, exhausted by my vigil, that I fell asleep.

So fatigued was I that I did not hear my alarm o'clock, and as I had no regular hours for my work upon the days when I was not scheduled to appear at the Veritzen offices, the members of my household thought I did not wish to be disturbed. It was almost noon therefore when Katie's voice sounded excitedly through the door.

"Oh, Missis Graham, vake oop vunce, and coom out here qveeck as you can! Dot Meester Hugh Grantland und dot Chopsteeck man here to see you."

Average man's estimate of all womankind is based on the single individual he knows best.

Food, rather than shelter was the severest want of the pioneers of Ohio
There was plenty of venison, turkey and deer meat, but this became tiresome enough. There was no bread or salt. The Indian corn, when once started, was the chief reliance for man and beast.

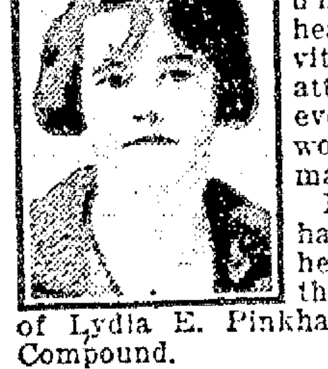
ATTRACTIVE WOMEN

If You Would Be Attractive You Must Be Healthy



A beautiful woman is always admired. There are many types of beauty. But no woman can be truly beautiful unless she is healthy. Radiant vitality is always attractive however plain a woman's features may be.

Many a woman has found her health improved through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Weakness, loss of weight, and a pale complexion were a few things of which Mrs. J. C. Taylor of Box 211, Tallahassee, Florida, complained before she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "I could not even sit down and talk to a friend for any length of time," she states. "I would forget what I was talking about and felt so blue." Mrs. Taylor is so pleased with the work of the Vegetable Compound that she keeps a bottle of it in the house at all times—and when it is empty, her husband makes sure that she has a new bottle. "I have regained my strength," Mrs. Taylor writes. "I can do all my housework now and I feel just fine."

SUNDAY MUSICALE ONE OF MOST POPULAR BILLS

Ensemble Has Been Playing Together for Seven Years with Few Changes

The Sunday Afternoon Musicale, although it doesn't sound very exciting, is nevertheless one of the most popular programs broadcast from WTAM, the radio station of the Willard Storage Battery Co., Cleveland.

This Sunday ensemble, with the exception of an occasional minor change, has been playing together for seven years. This fact alone is sufficient to guarantee a good orchestra. Each man has become accustomed to the style of his fellows. The big secret of their playing, however, is cooperation. In almost every orchestra, one instrument predominates. One particular musician carries the lead and the others follow him. In the WTAM ensemble this is not the case. One would never guess, hearing the orchestra play that Friederich Janssen, pianist, was the leader. All the members have been blended into a harmonious whole, making a true "artists ensemble."

With an apparently larger orchestra than is really the case, due primarily to a concert organ called the harmonium, they are enabled to play selections not ordinarily attempted by small orchestra. Most of their numbers are imported and arranged by Mr. Janssen. It is interesting to know that quite as many beautiful fox trots as well as waltzes are composed in Germany and other European countries as in the United States. The library of the ensemble is one of the largest and most complete in the country. It includes over [illegible] numbers with [illegible] and customers.

As was previously stated, the orchestra is under the direction of Friederich Janssen, pianist. Mr. Janssen has been in Cleveland for [illegible] years and has been with the Hotel Cleveland Orchestra all of that time.

The Sunday Afternoon Musicale is on the air from the Willard Station between 3 and 4:30 o'clock. The broadcasting of the orchestra is from the studio.

[illegible] given through the "mike" [illegible] days of next week will [illegible] for the big Thanksgiving [illegible] and many stations are [illegible] a feature for a few [illegible] recipes and menus for "Tur[illegible]

KDKA Program

[illegible] holiday entertainment will be [illegible] from KDKA, Pittsburgh, at [illegible] o'clock Wednesday night when a special Thanksgiving farm dance will be broadcast. The University of Chicago choir will feature songs appropriate for Thanksgiving when they appear before the microphone of WLS, at 9 o'clock, Wednesday night, and The Shrine Templer Chanters at WDAF, Kansas City, at the same hour, will offer a Thanksgiving Day program.

Probably the most important radio feature of Thanksgiving Day itself will be the broadcasting of some of the greatest football games in the country. The Cornell-Penn game through at least seven stations leads in importance while Pittsburgh and Penn State ranks near. The Miami-Cincinnati battle at Cincinnati, broadcast through WSAI, will also attract much attention in Marion.

Church Services

Thanksgiving Day services from various churches throughout the country are scheduled on many broadcasting bills, with Eastern stations leading in the transmission of these events.

All stations on the air Thursday night will feature only Thanksgiving Day entertainment.

A Cantata, "Pilgrims of 1620" is booked by WBAL, Baltimore, at 8 o'clock Thursday night, while the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra will present its second great program from WTAM at the same hour. Hot Springs will present a Thanksgiving Ball, the Boys' Choir of Houston will sing appropriate selections, Little Jack Little from WMC, Memphis, will entertain with "turkey songs", and a general good time is promised all, no matter what station is selected for the evening.

A few stations are planning silent nights for Thursday while many will not be on the air during the day but will be all set for the entertainments at night. WAIU, Columbus, will be among the silent stations on the holiday, but other Ohio stations have planned special programs.

REINALD WERRENRATH ON WEAF BILL SUNDAY

All Chain Stations To Broadcast Concert Program; Carrick at Piano

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone who had the honor of opening the first Atwater Kent Radio Hour program broadcast from WEAF last year, will be the artist to be heard in this famous Sunday period on Sunday night, Nov. 21, beginning at 9.15 o'clock Eastern Standard Time. The program will as usual be sent out through WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WRC, WWJ, WSAI, WGN, WCCO, KSD, WJAR, WTAG, WCAE, WTAM, WOC and WFI.

Reinald Werrenrath who will be assisted by Herbert Carrick at the piano, is without question probably the foremost American baritone of today. An indication of his popularity and the definite claim he has upon music lovers is revealed by his annual New York City recital held this year two weeks ago when in spite of a terrific rain storm he sang to a crowded house.

One of the many selections which Mr. Werrenrath will give will be heard for the first time, this being John A. Hopkins, "The Light I Love Best." Many favorites will be rendered by Mr. Werrenrath in his second Atwater Kent Radio Hour program which is announced as follows:

Mr. Werrenrath was born in Brooklyn and during his boyhood was popular in Brooklyn school athletic activities. Entering New York University, he was forced to abandon to a great extent his athletic activities because he began to seriously study music but even today Mr. Werrenrath is fond of outdoor sports and his golf clubs are always numbered with his baggage on all trips. Upon graduation he started singing with a church position eventually landing in the concert field and at the Metropolitan Opera House. He is now well known not only in America but in Europe.

VERSATILE VISCONTI

Robert Visconti, leader of the Hotel Gibson Orchestra which is heard through the Crosley WLW broadcasting station in Cincinnati on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from seven until eight o'clock, now has arranged his orchestra so as to be able to provide either classical or jazz selections. Some of his musicians are able to "double" with 'cello or banjo; saxaphone or clarinet, etc.

Belgium's three main political parties are said to be, fundamentally, in favor of woman suffrage; but party reasons have kept them from granting women a vote in any except municipal elections. In these latter elections, the number of women's votes is higher than that of the men; and since voting is obligatory, the vote even of women who are entirely indifferent to politics, may have a decisive part in the municipal elections in Belgium.

When a man aims at nothing he seldom misses his target.

TALKING UNDER WATER IS NEXT SCIENCE FEAT

Navy Experts Predicting Voices at Sea Bottom Soon Heard

Washington, Nov. 20—Having made the atmosphere an almost perfect medium for transmitting the human voice, scientists now are redoubling their efforts to make it simple to talk under water.

Navy experts predict that in the future it will be almost as simple to communicate in the depth of the ocean as above it.

Terming the new science, "supersonics," the Navy's experts are bending their energies in particular toward improvement of communication between submarines.

Since the World War great advance has been made in the art of underwater communication and depth sounding says an announcement by the Navy department. Up until 1918 the chief mediums were audible sound receivers and transmitters.

Discoveries in the application of the Piezo-electric effect to underwater sound transmission and reception, however, have opened up a new field.

Use of Short Waves

"The term, 'supersonics' refers to frequencies above the limits of audibility of the human ear," says the Navy announcement. "For instance, the human ear may be considered a sound receiver tuned to receive sounds lying between frequencies of 20 to 30,000 cycles per second. Sounds lying above this spectrum are inaudible and the reception of these sounds is accomplished by the use of the heterodyne principle.

"By use of these short waves, it has been possible to telephone under water and to telegraph at speeds of 20 to 30 words per minute. This is considered by scientists as quite an advance over the older methods of audible transmission and reception under water."

So important does the Navy regard the possibilities of underwater communication that the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., has established a sound division with Dr. Harvey C. Hayes acting as superintendent. Two barges have been fitted up to be used in the sound experiments.

The research has been spurred, not only here but abroad, as a result of the submarine menace during the World War. At the beginning of the war, the Navy's devices for detecting the presence of submarines through sound receivers were unsatisfactory. Toward the end of the war great improvement was made. Now a sonic depth finder has been developed which it is declared will accurately place a submarine in depths of 40 to 4,000 fathoms and in a radius of forty miles.

New Depth Finder

A new peace-time use has been discovered for the sonic depth finder. When the Navy department was called upon to survey the route of the War Department's submarine telegraph cable which serves Alaska, the problem on a rough ocean bed, made up partly of submerged mountains faced it.

By the use of the sonic depth finder—measuring the depth of the water by the angle of reception of the vessel's own propeller sounds which were reflected—the Navy experts were able to make a map of the bed of the ocean without seeing it.

Another use for this war-born device is in protecting Atlantic ship lanes against huge ice-bergs. The distance and bearing of the bergs is obtained by means of echoes given off by the submerged faces of the bergs. While the range is still somewhat limited, scientists hope to perfect the sounder to a degree where it will be comparatively easy to spot icebergs and plot their course."

BAKER AND DALHART TO APPEAR ON RADIO BILL

Vaudeville Headliners Scheduled To Broadcast with Eveready Group Tuesday

Belle Baker and Vernon Dalhart, both vaudeville "headliners" for years, will be the guest artists of the Eveready Group when that popular aggregation of entertainers give their weekly broadcasting program on Tuesday night, Nov. 23, through WEAF, WEEI, WFI, WCAE, WGR, WWJ, WOC, WCCO, KSD, WJAR, WTAG, WGN, WTAM, WSAI and WRC at 9 o'clock Eastern Standard Time.

Belle Baker will be heard in many songs of vaudeville fame while Vernon Dalhart will engage in his own specialty, a "Hill Billy presentation. Dalhart, popularly known as "The Hill Billy Man", at one time sang in both light and grand opera, although he is of course best known as a stellar performer in the vaudeville field. The Eveready Orchestra, under the direction of Max Jacobs, and the regular soloists of the Eveready Group will participate in this offering as usual.

M'NAMEE WILL GIVE REPORT OF ARMY-NAVY TILT

Famous WEAF Sports Announcer To Present Play-by-Play Account

Graham McNamee, the well-known WEAF sports announcer, will give a play by play description of the progress of the Army-Navy football game direct from Soldiers Field, Grant Park, Chicago, for the audiences of WEAF, WEEI, WTIC, WGR, WCCO and KSD on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 27, beginning at 1:45 o'clock Eastern Standard time.

This game, practically the last of the college football season, probably is the most colorful and spectacular of the entire year. This is occasioned by the intense rivalry between the two branches of the government service and the fact that this great sporting classic has among its spectators cabinet officers, high government officials, and generals and admirals in abundance.

The two service teams have made excellent records in their previous games during the season, and the game should be, from the listener's standpoint, one of the best sent out on the air by WEAF and its associated stations this year. Phillips Carlin, who has been heard during the broadcasting of many of these games on previous Saturday afternoons, will be present with Graham McNamee and will give a summing up of the salient points of the game for the radio audience.

Italian women have lost all their recently acquired municipal voting rights owing to the abolition of elected municipal authorities and a new decision that they are ineligible for the office of Podesta, or mayor.

"HUMAN EPIGRAM" ON BILL

Roy Mulford, Jr., well-known newspaper man, who has been called the "human epigram" under the auspices of the Press Radio Bible Service, Inc., will broadcast through WSAI Sunday, Nov. 21, at 8 o'clock, an address on "The Biggest Advertising Campaign in the World."

SHUT-IN PROGRAMS

William Dunning arranges special programs for shut-ins. They are broadcast every Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock through WLW.

46 RESPOND TO GOSPEL CALL OF EVANGELIST

Greatest Meeting of Series Is Held at Calvary Church

Forty-six persons were converted at what proved to be the greatest of the revival services now in progress at the Calvary Evangelical Church, at the service at the church last night. Rev. Harry W. Vom Bruch, who is conducting the revival, spoke on the subject, "A Great Romance", based on the story of Ruth and Naomi.

Delegations from the First Evangelical Church at Westerville, O., the Greenwood Evangelical Church, the Wonder Bible Class of Calvary Evangelical Church and the County Children's Home all of Marion, were present.

Rev. G. N. Perkins, pastor of the Westerville Church, who headed that delegation offered the opening prayer. Captain William Killock of the local Salvation Army post played a cornet solo, after which Richard Zachman, a talented young musician of this city, played a solo on the hand saw. A vocal solo was sung by Harry D. Clarke after which Miss Birdie Dixon-Loes, pianist, of the evangelistic party, played several selections.

A delegation from Canton, O., where Rev. Vom Bruch conducted revival services two successive years, is expected to be in attendance at the service at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Sunday services will be held at 10:30 a. m., 7:30 p. m., and at 6:30 p. m., at which time Harry D. Clarke of Cardiff, Wales, musical director of the evangelistic party, will complete an account of his life.

VETERAN LEAPS FROM WASHINGTON MONUMENT

Screams Heard, but No One Sees Demented Man Make Jump

Washington, Nov. 20—A discouraged and apparently unbalanced veteran of the Spanish American war committed suicide dramatically today by leaping from the top of the Washington monument which towers 555 feet.

He was identified later as Henry C. Anderson, an inmate of the United States Soldiers Home here.

With a shout of "vamos"—Spanish for "away," or "let us go"—Anderson made the fatal leap from the north side of the shaft facing the White House. The screams were heard by guards and a small party of tourists, but no one actually saw him dive into space.

Our curiosity is most aroused to see ourselves as others see us, when we get stared at relentlessly on the street. One would fain fathom the reason.

CITY OFFICES TO BE RE-GROUPED BY NEXT MONTH

Plans To Be Submitted to City Council at Next Meeting

Definite plans for the second floor plan of the municipal office rooms in the Eagles building on W. Center-st were agreed upon last night at a conference of the building committee of City Council. The plans will be submitted to Council at its semi-monthly meeting Monday night and work of preparing the rooms for occupancy by city officials will start at once, committee members announced today.

Details of the first floor plan, which present the most puzzling part of the City Hall remodeling program, have not been fully agreed upon. It is expected that agreement on this part of the work will be reached next week and in the meantime preparations for moving offices from the first to the second floor will get under way at once.

Offices of the Mayor, City Engineer, Health Department, City Auditor, Clerk, and Milk and Meat Inspector are to be transferred to the second floor and according to present plans the change will probably be made about Dec. 1. The C., D. & M. Electric Light & Power Co. which now occupies the rooms to be taken over by the city, expects to move to the Marion Building on S. Main-st the latter part of next week.

Will Redecorate

No remodeling of the second floor will be necessary, it is stated, and as a consequence it will be possible for the city officials to move in as soon as painters and decorators have completed their work. This will require but a few days, it is believed, so that it is regarded as practically certain that the mayor and his official associates will be able to move into their new quarters about the first of next month.

With all of these offices out of the way leaving only the police department on the ground floor, remodeling work there will then be started. The first floor will have to be completely remodelled, it is stated, to provide quarters for the new municipal court which is to begin operations on Jan. 1.

Officials of the Eagles Holding Co., which will pay for all of the remodelling and redecorating, stated today that they plan to provide exceptionally attractive plan to provide exceptionally attractive rooms for the court.

OFFICIAL COUNT SHOWS RECORD VOTE FOR JUDGE

Judge Justice, Elected to Court of Appeals, Polls Record Vote

Charles L. Justice, of Marion, elected judge of the district Court of Appeals in the balloting on Nov. 2, rolled up a total majority of 25,079 over his opponent, E. N. Warden of Napoleon, official figures received here today from the Secretary of State's office disclosed. This majority, believed to be the largest ever on record in this district, gives Judge Justice a favorable margin in all but one of the 16 counties in the district. Judge Warden carried only Henry County, where he resides.

Judge Justice received his largest majorities in Marion County and in Putnam County, where he resided before coming to this city.

Warden carried Henry County by 2,497 votes and the Justice majorities in the other 15 counties are as follows: Allen, 2,211; Auglaize, 1,403; Crawford, 1,746; Defiance, 461; Hancock, 918; Hardin, 557; Logan, 142; Marion, 6,840; Paulding, 108; Putnam, 2,887; Seneca, 1,153; Union, 506; Van Wert 155, and Wyandot, 1,577.

ENGLAND'S CONEY ISLAND KEEPS ALL LIGHTS BRIGHT

Blackpool, Nov. 20— England's 'super-Coney-Island' is defying all government edicts regarding diminution of public lighting on account of the coal strike.

Every fall, Blackpool likes to light itself up. Half a million multi-colored electric lights illuminate five miles of the sea promenade, and the whole town is a blaze of color. As the nights draw in so Blackpool's lights go up. But this time it is against the express orders of the government.

The Emergency Regulations of the government state that no coal is to be used for pleasure lighting, and that all artificial lighting is to be restricted to the lowest point possible—even shop window lighting has been abandoned and street lighting has been brought down to the minimum compatible with safety.

But Blackpool says that it has several hundreds of tons foreign coal which is useless for anything else except illumination and it therefore intends to carry out its original program.

COLORFUL UNIVERSITY LIFE VIVIDLY DESCRIBED

If You Are a Football Fan You Will "Eat Up" This Story; If You Are Not One You Will Become One for Life

CHAPTER I

The first time I ever saw Rose Abbott she stood in the rose garden of her father's mansion in Hyde-port, her arms full of flowers for the dinner table.

She is lovelier now than she was then, a blooming rose instead of a bud; but I shall never forget what an exquisite picture she made that June day when I shuffled up the driveway.

As slim and fine as a young tree, graceful as a bird, as assured as a princess, she turned her face toward me and I saw a pair of great blue eyes that regarded me gravely.

Her hair was lustrously black, piled up on her head Japanese fashion. Her skin was rose and ivory, her nose small, straight, perfect; her lips ripe and full; her forehead low and broad, her face a perfect oval. When she smiled it was like a billow suddenly breaking into milky foam.

Not more than one girl like Rose appears in a generation; more would be too much to expect of nature. I suppose Helen of Troy might have resembled her; if so, Paris was perfectly justified. Such women possess something beyond their visible loveliness; they radiate a force that men cannot resist.

The glance of her eye gave my heart a shock from which it has never recovered. I was almost knocked off my feet, tipped over, struck stupid.

When I had entered the Abbott estate I was a careless, shiftless, happy-go-lucky boy, fancy free, contented, indifferent to girls.

I gazed at her goggle-eyed, unable to believe there could be such beauty. How did this goddess come to be standing in old Abbott's garden? I had stopped short, forgetful of my errand thinking only of what I was seeing.

Rose had turned at my approach and regarded me indifferently and impersonally. She spoke; her voice was like music. But this is what she said:

"Please take those packages around to the back door. I thought the tradesmen understood they were to use the lane and enter the garden from the rear."

"I beg your pardon, Miss," I stammered. "I did not know and I won't let it happen again.

The girl bent her white neck and lowered her head over a rosebush, while, with a backward glance, I went around to the kitchen and turned over three or four bundles to the cook.

When a fellow is twenty-one years old he is apt to go dotty about any girl who is halfway pretty, but I assure you that I had rather disliked women up to this moment, had been utterly indifferent to the town girls, and when I entered the front gate had no more idea that in a minute I would be head over heels in love that I would be transported to the moon.

Having disposed of the parcels, I went to my horse and wagon, and jogged back to the village. Things were all topsy-turvy for me, and I had to try to straighten them out. I have just tried to tell you how Rose looked to me; how I looked to Rose—well, I knew pretty well. I had on a gray flannel shirt, and my torn old trousers were held in place by one suspender. I wore a straw hat with a hole in the crown, and my shoes were dreadful. I didn't wear any stockings, and one of my bare toes was visible through a hole in the sole.

To Rose I was just one of the natives, the shiftless, useless, lazy descendants of the original settlers of the Cape Cod resort—people in whose veins ran the blood of the Pilgrims of Plymouth, the finest stock in America.

One of my ancestors had the same price on his head as Sam Adams, and they hid together from the British soldiers in Boston town during Revolutionary days. Another one commanded a frigate in the War of 1812, and sank a British warship twice the size of his own in a naval battle off Jamaica.

Life was fairly easy on Cape Cod for the original natives; a mild climate, plenty of fish in the sea, lobsters, clams, mussels; as the soil was poor, they didn't try to raise much of anything but garden truck.

When some of our folks got ambitions they went out West, while those who remained grew more and more lazy. My mother died when I was only four or five years old, and dad brought me up in a funny little tumbledown cottage on the water front. We got along pretty well; never had much money, but didn't need it.

Clothes were the least of our troubles. I didn't care how old or worn my garments were. In summer I was as apt, as not to go in swimming with them and let the sun dry them as I moved around.

As Hydeport became a summer resort, lots of beautiful cottages were built and the village began to be filled with well-dressed, laughing summer folks, who associated with one another and regarded the natives as nothing at all. Of course we prospered from their patronage, opened up stores, undertook to supply them with what they wanted, but we never got friendly with them.

To tell the truth, they seemed to me ostentatious and unpleasant people, and I didn't want anything to do with them. I didn't mind mowing a lawn or doing a bit of carpenter work, or driving the delivery wagon for Moses Swift, who owned the general store, as it kept me in pocket money; but I didn't worry because they didnt care to associate with me.

I suppose I was a lazy, rather stupid kid whose prospects of ever amounting to much were very slight. You see, there didn't seem to be anything I was ever likely to need that I couldn't get without effort. And all of a sudden I wanted Rose Abbott with about as much chance of getting her as of becoming President of the United States.

That there was a vast social gulf between the natives of Hydeport and the summer residents occurred to me now for the first time. Hitherto, like the other original residents, I had regarded the summer folks with much the same toleration and contempt that they had for us. Now I could see myself with the eyes of Rose Abbott, if she had noticed me enough to make any observations, and the vision was not pleasing.

Henry Abbott, her father, was a very rich New York merchant. He had erected a cottage in Hydeport at a cost of about seventy-five thousand dollars. It had thirty rooms, and there was a garage which accommodated eight cars. The grounds were about four acres in extent and had the best water front location on the north of the town.

Abbott was a big man with a bald head and a thick red neck and pig eyes. However it happened that he owned a daughter who was the Rose of the World don't ask me to explain He was the person who started the private beach notion in Hydeport. He fenced in a part of the strand in front of his home, put up "No Trespassing" signs, formed an association of summer residents, and from that time they did all their bathing at that place. The natives of the town were not good enough to use the same part of the ocean with these people; I think it was the private beach that proved to the greater part of our folks, who still supposed this was a democracy and every man as good as the next one, what the visitors thought of us. We began to get even with them by overcharging them in every way we could for goods or services rendered.

Rose Abbott was the daughter of a woman whom Abbott had divorced. As she had lived with her mother until the death of that poor lady the previous winter, this was the first appearance of the girl at Hydeport. I supose there was nowhere for her to go except to live with her father, but his second wife was only a few years older than his daughter, so their companionship may not have been entirely pleasant.

I thought a lot about the girl during the next few days after meeting her in her garden. Keeping my eyes peeled, I was lucky enough to see her going into the post office, and once as I was driving the wagon she whizzed by me at the wheel of a roadster. Of course, she never noticed me at all; I was just a native.

As far as the summer people were concerned, we might have been black as negroes, red as Indians, or yellow as Chinese. They considered us as a menial class, fortunately located on the soil to give them service.

The caste system is a terrible thing, but it seems to me that where it is successful it must rest upon the acquiescence of all the castes. If an aristocrat says to a poor man, "I am of different clay from you," and poor man salaams and says, "Yes, lord," then you have the caste system working properly.

In America we have a lot of aristocrats as proud as any in England or India. They consider themselves far removed from the common herd. What will always save this country is that the common herd doesn't take any stock in the claims of the aristocrats. They know our aristocracy is founded on money, and, as this is the land of opportunity, almost any day one of the common herd may invent something or strike gold, and presto! he is as good an aristocrat as the rest.

When I was nineteen I had graduated from the county high school and passed, with honors, the Harvard entrance examinations. Dad didn't have much money, and I wasn't eager to leave home, go to Boston and put in three or four years at college. It seemed to me much more fun to loaf around town. I could be out in my boat for more than six months in the year, and I'd rather bring in a mess of bluefish than listen to a lot of lectures at a college. As I have explained, I was a very easy-going, useless kind of kid, and I didn't function, not because there was no engine inside of me to make me go, but because I didn't see the sense of starting the engine.

DOWN THE FIELD!

He was two-thirds around! The white lines had flown beneath his feet and he could hear the screech of ecstasy from the Harvard stands. Then he saw Yale's quarterback, the surest in the country, crouched to tackle and right in his path!

Seeing Rose Abbott didn't get me started on a new course immediately. Being intelligent, even if I was a loafer, I was well aware that the girl would look on me with about the same personal interest she would bestow on a Portuguese, of whom they were plenty in the vicinity; and what was the use of getting all fussed up when it wouldn't do me any good?

I did throw away the old straw hat and the torn pants and the broken shoes, and I began wearing stockings except when I was going out in my boat. If she should see me again, I wouldn't be such a scarecrow as I had been the first time.

CHAPTER II

About two weeks later I was fishing a mile offshore. It was a sunny day, the sea was like a mirror, and it was very hot. I was down to shirt and pants, bare feet, and wore a big wide straw hat to keep the sun off my neck and face. As the fish were not biting, I was sitting there so quietly that I was almost dozing when I heard a voice.

I would know her voice anywhere, though she only spoke to me once that day; but it was a cinch she wasn't around my boat, and I thought I had been dreaming when I heard her call:

"Say, boy in the boat!"

I swung around, and there she was in the sea about a dozen feet away, with an orange bathing cap, her cheeks pink with her exertions, and her legs and arms bare and gleaming through the green water. "I'm tired" she said. "Help me into your boat to rest awhile."

"That's a very long swim, miss," I told her as I put one hand under her arm and gave her a tug which brought her flopping into the bottom of the boat. One bare foot landed on the cool scaly back of a good-sized bluefish, and she gave a shriek and pulled her foot away.

"Pooh—it's nothing," she said. "I could get ashore again without trouble, but why take chances?"

"Quite right. It's a very hot day, too, and the sun might overcome you."

Miss Abbott had seated herself on one of the cross-seats and rested, chin on her palm, as she gazed seaward. She wore the skimpiest kind of one-piece bathing suit, and did not seem to realize that she was exposed to the eyes of a young man. Probably would be more ashamed of that bluefish, I thought rather bitterly.

"Are the fish biting?" she asked politely.

"No; and they won't unless you keep quiet."

"I beg your pardon."

"It's all right," I said, suddenly ashamed of my rudeness. "I don't really care whether I catch anything or not."

"I know," she said, with one of her smiles. "It's just the fun of being here. You are the boy who delivered some parcels at the house a couple of weeks ago."

"Yes, miss. Kind of you to remember me."

"I noticed you because you were the worst dressed person I ever set eyes on. I mention it because I suggested to the cook that we get you some clothes; but she said you had better clothes and preferred to wear those."

"I appreciate your intentions," I said.

"You talk rather well for a native."

"We all speak English, except the Portuguese."

"I didn't mean to offend you. I used the word native to distinguish between residents and summer visitors."

"You didn't offend me," I said. "You are much too pretty and attractive to give offense."

Rose stood up in the boat and looked at me as though I had committed some terrible crime.

"You clod?" she said. "How dare you presume to make a reference to my appearance?"

With this she dived over the side and started for the shore. I was so mad I stooped down and picked up the bluefish. I could have struck her fairly in the face with it when she came to the surface, but, after all, a man can't do such things, no matter how great the provocation.

I watched her as she swam, and it seemed to me she was tired; she had only been resting in the boat for a couple of minutes, and it was nearly a mile to the shore.

"Serve her right if she did drown," I muttered. "I was only trying to make a graceful speech, and she turned around and called me a clod."

But while I was saying this I was pulling up the anchor and getting in my lines. It took me four or five minutes, and by this time she was a third of the way to shore. I started my little gas engine and turned the nose of the dory toward her.

Hardly was I under way when I saw she was having trouble. She was splashing around, and her strokes were uncertain. Why she didn't float until she rested I do not know, though there are some girls that never learn to float.

I pushed the lever 'way open and began to overhaul her fast; when I was in hearing distance I hailed her:

"Want help?"

She looked around, and although she was sinking under the surface and sputtering, I could hear her call:

"No."

"Well, your get helped whether you want it or not," I said, between my teeth, and drove the boat straight for her. When I was a hundred feet away I saw her go completely under. I shut off the engine—the boat would cover the remainig distance under its own momentum—and I ran to the bow and stood ready to dive. I could see her, three or four feet down, through the clear green water apparently doubled up; and then I dived, picked her up neatly, and brought her to the surface without any trouble at all.

The dory had shot ahead thirty or forty feet, and I swam after it. She was unconscious, and had swallowed a lot of water, by the looks of her. She was a wonderfully soft and flexible thing in my arms, just a slight girl, all the impudence and arrogance gone out of her.

It was a job getting her into the dory, and I almost capsized it before I rolled her abroad and climbed after her. Then I laid her on her stomach lifted her hips, and let the sea water come out of her lungs and flow upon the bottom of the boat. Afterward I put my ear on her chest and caught just the fainest flutter of her heart, so I knew she was alive. Next I worked her arms back and forth until her lungs began to breathe air. In a minute her eyes opened and she looked up at me with her big dark-blue orbs and sent a thrill through me that I felt down to my toes.

"Where am I?" she asked. "What happened?"

"You are in my boat again; and you nearly drowned," I said.

"Oh I remember. I got very tired and then I had a cramp. You saved my life, I suppose."

"Don't mention it," I said offhand.

She closed her eyes again. She was deadly pale, of course, and weak, and I let her rest there while I started the engine and turned the bow of the dory toward the shore. Presently she managed to sit up. The least I expected her to do was to apologize to me for calling me a clod, but nothing was farther from her mind.

"You are responsible for this," she said. "You insulted me, and I was compelled to leave your boat before I was rested. That is why I gave out in the water. Nevertheless, you did save my life, and I shall ask my father to suitably reward you."

"What's your idea of a suitable reward for saving you?" I asked, boiling with rage, because I hadn't insulted her; on the contrary, she called me a clod.

"What you wish. A large sum of money?"

"Well," I said vindictively, "I think a suitable reward for saving you would be a year in the penitentiary. I should have left you to drown, because with your temper and disposition youre good for nothing on this earth."

The recently drowing lady gazed at me with a look of astonishment that was positively funny. It was about the way a royal Bengal tiger would look if a cocker spaniel challenged him to a fight.

"How dare you?" she demanded with what arrogance she could command.

"Look here," I said "my name is William Alden. My ancestors came to Hydeport from Plymouth, where they landed from the Mayflower. I don't know who your people are, or anything about them; they came here three or four years ago. I didn't seek to make your acquaintance. I was a mile out at sea in my boat when you demanded that I take you in out of the water. You insolently began to patronize me and my people. When I tell you you are too pretty and attractive to mean to give offense you call me a clod and jump overboard.

"That's bad enough, but then you have to go and pull this drowning stunt and force me to jump in after you and get my clothes all wet. If I thought saving your life was worth any money, I might ask your father to give it to me; but the truth is I ought to be fined for pulling you out."

I concluded because I was out of breath. Of course I didn't mean all I said—just got carried away by my own eloquence. However, the effect on Rose was curious. Her color had come back to her cheeks, her eyes burned furiously at first and then a sort of smile came into them, and when I finished she was looking at me in the most friendly fashion.

"What a wonderful person you are!" she said. "Just the same you have a terrible Cape Cod twang when you talk."

Now this was entirely beside the point. I knew I spoke with a slight Yankee accent; but why twit me about it, when the subject of discussion was something different? I didn't have an answer, and just glared at her, which made her laugh out loud. She was very exasperating.

"Isn't it lovely out here in the bay?" she said. "Do you remember the quotation, Nature is so lovely, and only man is vile'?"

"You've got the quotation all wrong, and if your intention was to be insulting, suppose you go overboard and swim in the rest of the way?"

"Oh, no," she said with a shudder. "I couldnt go in the water again, not now. Please."

"It's up to you. We'll be at the dock in five minutes anyway."

"Isn't there anything I can do for you for saving my life?'

Stop insulting me at every opportunity."

"We are hardly likely to meet again, so there will be no opportunity."

I realized this suddenly, with a pang. This acrimonious conversation had actually been giving me a great deal of pleasure, and I only understood it then. But I made a sarcastic retort.

"The exalted daughter of a summer resident could hardly have acquaintance with a lowly native of Hydeport."

Rose smiled pleasantly. "If all the descendants of the Mayflower dressed the way you do, nobody would speak to any of them. I promise to bow to you if you wear a hat without a hole in the crown."

The boat reached the shore, and she leaped out on the little wharf. Then she extended her soft small hand.

"I really am very grateful, and I am sorry I was snobbish," she said.

Before I could muster an answer she was running swiftly along the shore toward the bath houses at the private beach from which she had started her long swim.

CHAPTER III

That gibe of Rose Abbott's at my manner of speaking English was responsible for changing the whole course of my life. I brooded over it, I listened to myself speaking aloud to try to detect the twang which caused her to jeer.

It seemed that I was no better than the other clam diggers of Hydeport, talked like them as well as looked like them. Curiously enough, I had always fancied myself in masquerade when I wore torn old clothes and lived the life of the shiftless young natives. As I had no other associates, it was natural enough that I had dropped into the vernacular without noticing it. At high school I had been a prize pupil in elocution, my English had been pure and undefiled; now it was apparently full of Cape Cod color.

With all my family pride I had been living in a manner to justify the summer folks, who could judge only by appearances, in looking down on me. Financially, I was no better off than any other native, worse than most because I had been content to work for a bare living and made no effort to save. Since dad's death I had lived alone in our shack, and I realized now that it was pretty dirty and offensive to the eye.

Rose Abbott felt kindly toward me for the moment, but she would relapse into her former attitude when she found out more about me.

How could I get rid of this twang? Never while I continued to live where it was spoken. It meant a complete revolution in my habits and point of view to pull out of Hydeport, and a dialect was apt to stick to one all his life no matter where he lived.

I could go to college. Why not? I had been qualified for Harvard, had been too shiftless to continue my education. Surely I could learn a living in Boston or in Cambridge while I was going through school. During the summer I could come back and live for nothing in Hydeport, as I had always done. The only place to get rid of the accent would be in college and I would show Rose Abbott that I had no twang next time I talked with her.

Being temperamental like any boy, I decided that she should not see me again until I spoke as correctly as she did, but how to fill in the five or six weeks between now and the opening of Harvard in late September?

Next morning I locked the door of the shack, caught a train to New Bedford and shipped on a fishing vessel for a cruise of four or five weeks. This would provide me with funds to get established in Boston, and enable me to pay a year's tuition at Harvard in advance.

Life on a fishing smack had no hardships for me. I loved the foam which the hard labor of cleaning the catch, salting or icing it. We fed very well on the Sarah Truesdale, carried a prime cook who served us beefsteaks, frosted hot bread, cakes, pies and other delicacies. Those who imagine that the crews of fishing vessels live on fish know nothing about that interesting industry.

We got back to New Bedford the second week in September which gave me time for a flying trip to Hydeport, a visit to the shack, a chat in the general store, a few games of pool and then I was off for Boston and my college career. I did not set eyes on Rose Abbott during the visit. Being willing to sell my soul to see her, I tormented myself by keeping away from every place where she was in the least likely to be.

When I entered Harvard I was about three years older than the average freshman, so tall and strong and mature in my point of view that my classmates seemed to me to be a lot of silly kids. A few of them were actually in knee pants, victims of forcing which put children of fifteen or sixteen into a university at an age which causes them to lose some of the most attractive features of college life.

For reasons of economy I was glad to have a roommate and I was teamed up with a boy named Ralph Suffern from New York City. He was nineteen years old, a graduate of one of the fashionable prep schools, almost as tall as I was, but I flattered myself he looked five years younger.

Reliable Used Pianos

A used piano is as dependable as the Music Store from which it is purchased.

The house of Ackerman has, for nearly sixty years, sold new and used pianos at the lowest possible prices consistant with quality. This is as true today as it was in 1869, when this institution was founded.

Our stocks of used Pianos is constantly changing, and replacements are necessarily entirely different, in makes, finish, action, tone, etc.

From our present stock, we recommend two especially fine upright instruments that will satisfy nearly anyone who requires a first class piano, and wishes it at a bargain price.

A beautiful, sweet-toned Sterling piano, in an exceptionally artistic mahogany case. This instrument came to us from a fine home in Marion, in trade on a Grand piano. It can hardly be told from a new instrument, and the price is less than half of what it originally sold for. The price is $225.00. Terms, $25.00 cash on delivery, and the balance at $10.00 per month.

Another good piano which we can offer at this time is a genuine Wesser Bros. (N. Y.) upright in rich Mahogany case, and with Mandolin attachment. It is truly a remarkable value at $145.00. Very easy terms if you wish.

Before you buy a used piano, just call at

Circus Winter Quarters

COST OF RENEWING EQUIPMENT HEAVY

are Industrial Centers

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 20—With the coming of November winter has come for the circus world. The big tops have sprung up mushroom-like and been razed again for the last time during the season of '26. The voice of the ballyhoo man has been stilled. The blaring bands that are like no other musical organizations are no longer to be heard in the land. The wagons have been packed and the trains loaded for the final long jump, and "the biggest show on earth"—there are some twenty claimants to that title on one ground or another—has gone into winter quarters.

Since the first of last May the average big circus has traveled from 14,000 to 15,000 miles, and may easily have ranged the country from coast to coast. It has given in the neighborhood of 300 performances. With lucky breaks in the matter of weather, with good crops, and with generally prosperous conditions throughout the country, the man in the ticket wagon has probably stood knee-deep in currency and silver time and again, and the season's receipts have run far into the hundreds of thousands. What the profits have been only the proprietors and the income tax officials may know.

Expenses Heavy

But with a business that fairly coins money—that has an ever-constant and devoted clientele—many people fail to understand why it is limited to a six months' season. They ask, why not route the big tent show to follow the sun? It is always warm enough somewhere in the United States for a circus, and it would seem that this universally popular amusement enterprise might be conducted on the year-round basis.

The answer is that the magnitude of the circus business precludes its being run 12 months a year, or even ten or eight. Six months are required in permanent quarters to make ready for the wear and tear, stress and strain, of six months on the road. This period of preparation is essential not only for the physical equipment of the circus, but for the performers, both human and animal.

Heavy Renewal Outlays

Those who know something about the enormous daily receipts of one of the really big shows, and figuring on daily operating expenses, jump to the conclusion that its profits must be fantastically high, do not take into consideration the heavy renewal outlays during the six months that the show is off the road. It is estimated that the circuses that annually tour the United States have an aggregate cash replacement value of approximately $15,000,000 and that it costs more than $5,000,000 each year to winter them and get them ready for the next season.

A business that must meet such a proportionately large expense as that in addition to the staggering daily operating expense, and that is only taking in money six months in the years, necessarily must take in a lot of it if it is to break even, to say nothing of earning dividends on the investment. And when it comes to the net profits, it must be remembered that because of the extremely hazardous nature of the business, the earnings of a circus must be far above those of any ordinary commercial or industrial enterprise.

Industrial Center

Winter quarters of the circuses are to be found in New England, in the middle west, in the sunny south, and on the Pacific Coast. The Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey's combined shows have their permanent establishment at Bridgeport, Conn. Peru, Ind., is the base for the Hagenbeck-Wallace and Sells Floto circuses. The Christie and Lee Brothers make their winter stand at Beaumont, Tex., and Al G. Barnes' trained wild-animal shows are at The Palms, California, the Sparks' circus is down near Macon, Ga., and so on.

Each winter establishment covers acres of ground and calls for numerous steel, brick, concrete and frame buildings. Not only must the equipment, personnel, and animals be housed, but training quarters must be provided and innumerable shops for the construction and repair of the circus paraphernalia.

The latter constitute a veritable industrial center. Tents must be built or rebuilt. New center, quarter, and side poles must be provided for next year's strenuous battle with the elements. New seats, stringers, and jacks must be sawed and otherwise carpentered to furnish the new or old tents. New wagons must be constructed and old ones repaired and repainted. Costumes of all kinds must be refurnished or new ones designed and turned out. Scenery and other equipment for the pageants and great spectacles must be renovated or built anew.

Even the horses that do the heavy hauling of the circus are in need of repairs after the grueling campaign of six months. At least they must have the rest, reconditioning, and care that is the equivalent of the repairs to the inanimate equipment of the circus.

Always in Training

And there is no winter rest for circus performers. They must keep constantly in training, for perfect physical condition is the fundamental requirement of their profession. Some of the stars—trapeze and slack or tight wire artists, bareback riders, gymnasts, contortionists, and clowns—transfer their acts from the tented arena to the stage and are seen in vaudeville during the winter months thus keeping themselves fit by working the year around.

Others in the winter quarters do the equivalent of their daily dozen, going through their acts repeatedly and [illegible] and rehearsing new stunts. [illegible] in other quarters, [illegible] of acrobats [illegible] practice are put into developing [illegible] which when it is perfected [illegible] circus patrons may look at [illegible] minutes twice a day. Clowns [illegible] long hours of studying and planning to work up a lot of new business or a different kind of makeup or costume that will convulse the youngsters and garner smiles from the grownups.

Back Scenes

In the ring barn a man in overalls who looks naught but the handsome silk hatted, conventionally attired ringmaster of the tented ring, cracks his long whip idly while a broad-backed, sleek horse ambles gently around a 42-foot circle, and a young woman in sweater and bloomers, instead of snowy white tights and gauzy skirts, practices her stuff on the "resin back" with no applauding thousands to give her inspiration and to whom she may kiss her hands. Here when she essays [illegible]

In another barn a trainer puts a herd of performing elephants [illegible] through their paces every day, [illegible] up new acts for these ponderous performers. In steel barred arenas [illegible] animal acts are constantly trained and rehearsed, for these performers must never be permitted to forget their subjugation, and in other quarters the animals that are not dangerous or tricky are put through their paces from day to day and patiently schooled in new stuff.

Of the circus world, only the side show freaks may rest in winter, and among them even there are those who [illegible] perfecting, must [illegible] in order to repair the [illegible] of a season on the road.

REED TOLD OF SLUSH FUND IN HIS OWN STATE

Ballot Stuffing and Cor- ion Charges Made to Committee

Nov. 20—The senate mmittee, which spent the the direction of Senator Democrat of Missouri, inves- torial primaries from one country to the other, was its spotlight upon the gial election in Reed's fraud, ballot stuffing, cor- the use of a slush fund timated at from $250,000 were made against the machine in Kansas City in appeal to the committee for a federal inquiry into the democratic victory of Harry Hawes.

The request was made by a man who signed himself H. R. Walmsley.

Take Charges to Reed

The charges went back to Reed's front door as he waged a vigorous campaign for the election of Hawes. They did not involve either Reed or Hawes, however, in the use of the alleged slush fund.

The appeal for a senate investigation was sent to Sen. George W. Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, leader of the insurgent bloc, who immediately turned it over to members of the committee. Copies of the charges, it was learned, also were sent by Walmsley to Sen. George Wharton Pepper, Republican, of Pennsylvania; Senator-elect Frank R. Smith, Republican, of Illinois, and Senator-elect William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, all of whom were concerned in previous slush fund inquiries.

When talked about the Walmsley charges, Senator Norris said:

"Yes, I have received such a letter making the charges, that a street car company in Kansas City had contributed $25,000 to a campaign fund used in behalf of electing Hewes to the Senate. I have no other information except what was contained in the letter and I turned that over to the senate committee."

Tells of Gift

In his letter, it was learned, Walmsley charged that is was "common gossip" in Kansas City that the street car company "contributed between $250,000 and $750,000" to the Prendergast democratic machine which supported Hawes. This gift, Walmsley charged, was in return for a "twelve year extension of the company's franchise" to operate in Kansas City.

In support of his charges of fraud and corruption, it was learned that Walmsley referred particularly to the election results in the tenth precinct of the first ward of Kansas City, where, he alleged, the ballots showed a remarkable similarity of marking.

He even charged there were indications that the judges of elections themselves had marked the ballots, a majority of which were cast in favor of Hawes.

The complainant closed his letter with a general charge that "similar instances of fraud and corruption" could be shown in nearly every other precinct in Kansas City, controlled by the Prendergast machine. As Hawes carried Kansas City by an overwhelming majority, Walmsley inferred the result gave him his seat in the senate.

The mailing of copies of the charges to Pepper, Smith and Vare was not explained. It was apparent, however, that Walmsley intended to make certain that his allegations received careful consideration from republican members of the senate committee, even if the committee had to be asked to investigate the election in Reed's home state by the victims of the Missourian's slush fund inquiries in other states.

PRAYERS ASKED BY POPE PIUS FOR MEXICANS

Sounds Note of Highest Praise for "Martyrdom of Persecuted Catholics"

Rome, Nov. 20—Sounding a note of highest praise for the "martyrdom" of "persecuted Catholics" in Mexico, Pope Pius XI today addressed an encyclical to the world episcopate, appealing for prayers reaffirming the "undoubted triumph of justice" in that country.

After lauding the Catholics and clergy and the southern republic, Pope Pius examined in detail the anti-religious law passed by the Mexican government, laying stress upon the "vexations and persecutions" caused by the law.

The encyclical was replete with highest praise for the work of Catholic organizations in Mexico during the trying times of the religious conflicts. Particularly it praised the Knights of Columbus who organized the Association for Religious Liberty and the Association of Mexican Ladies and Mexican Catholic Youths, "who behaved splendidly."

Tells of Persecutions

"I can not refrain from tears," the encyclical read, "for the martyrdom undergone by several youths for Christ our king."

The encyclical points out instances of alleged persecutions imposed by the Mexican government, which it claimed had hampered the secular education of children and resulted in the imprisonment of laity and clergy. The message points out the firm and brave behavior of the episcopate in the face of its vain negotiations with the government and the reception of its "useless petition" to the Mexican congress.

Despite these persecutions, the message declares, the Mexican clergy resisted and there were only one or two deflections in its ranks of more than 4,000 priests, many of whom were attacked or killed.

The encyclical closes with an appeal for prayers "reaffirming the undoubted triumph of justice in Mexico."

CHRYSLER "50"
Standardized Quality

What your own eyes see will make you choose the Chrysler "50"

If you are attracted by the Chrysler "50" it is well to bear in mind that your choice in the four-cylinder field, in any event, must be made among five cars. Only four four-cylinder cars other than the Chrysler "50" are now being built in quantity.

You will be rushed to a decision by the startling character of the contrast. The mere appearance and dimensions of the Chrysler "50" alone will startle you by comparison—its family seating proportions, its size, and its marked beauty of design, finish and fittings.

But the vital thing is the contrast in performance — the power and speed of 50 miles and more per hour; the acceleration of the Chrysler "50" —5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds; and above all, the ease and economy with which it travels.

Never, it seems to us, was it so easy for the buyer to make sure that his money is buying the utmost as in contrast between the "50" and all ordinary fours and sixes.

Illini Hopeful of Victory Over Ohio State

Patsy's Patter

Gossip and Guesses in the World of Sport

By Pat Murphy

OHIO STATE closes its football schedule this afternoon against Illinois, at Champaign. The team representing the Buckeye college, chastened by the heartbreaking defeat of last Saturday when Michigan took the game in the final quarter by the slight margin of a single point, will enter the game this afternoon grimly determined that their record will not show more than one defeat for the season.

Many of the leading football coaches of the country are picking Ohio State to win today's game. Among them is Knute Rockne, coach of Notre Dame, believed by nearly every football follower to have the best claim of any of the college teams to the title of national champion.

OLD DAME RUMOR is at it again. Her latest has Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker buying the Boston Red Sox, Ty to act as president of the club and Tris as manager. This same deal would send Eddie Collins to Cleveland to succeed Speaker as manager. Interesting, if true. Speaker would be a big hit in Boston, where he made his major league debut, and where he was an idol for years. Boston has always been one of the best baseball teams in both the big leagues, and a combination of Ty and Tris might give Beantown the kind of ball to which she is entitled. But to spoil this good story comes an emphatic denial from Cobb that he is even considering buying into a big league club. And just as emphatic is the denial of Bobby Quinn, president of the Red Sox, that the present owners have any intention of selling. Quinn further says that no successor to Lee Fohl has yet been chosen, but that hopes are entertained to secure a manager who will bring the Red Sox out of the baseball rut in which they have been wallowing.

WRESTLING seems to be regaining its place on the sporting map. Killed by the wrestlers themselves by their putting on acts instead of contests, the game has been in disrepute for several years. But promoters are now entering the game who will not stand for "fixed" matches, and as a result the game is drawing capacity houses in many cities. Columbus packs them in once a week. St. Louis, Chicago, Omaha, Cleveland, New York and Los Angeles also are fast becoming wrestling centers. In Los Angeles, as in New York, the game is under the supervision of an athletic commission. This commission has just demanded of Ed "Strangler" Lewis that he accept a bout with Joe Stecher for Dec. 1, or relinquish all claim to the heavyweight title. This title has been in dispute since Lewis was "defeated" by Wayne "Big" Munn, who later lost to Stanislaus Zybysko, who is said to have doublecrossed the "wrestling trust" by agreeing to lose to Munn and then going out and beating him. Zybysko later lost the title to Stecher, who is now said to be willing to give Lewis a chance to win it back.

SOME of the promoters who are trying to rejuvenate the wrestling game have struck on a scheme which they think will be a big help in re-awakening public interest. This scheme is the formation of a class between the light heavyweights, who wrestle under 175 pounds, and the heavyweights. This class would be called junior heavyweight. There are a number of good wrestlers who are too heavy to compete for the crown now held by Clarence Eklund, and who must concede from 10 to 50 pounds when meeting men like Stecher, Lewis and the Zybysko brothers, as well as some of the behemoths who are no invading America from Europe. In this class are men like George Walker of Montreal; George Kotsonaros, the "little Greek Giant", John Pesek, the Nebraska "tiger man" and several others. To create a title for these boys to shoot at would do much to rekindle the love of the game in the customers who pay the freight.

THE squabble about the price of tickets for the Army-Navy game goes merrily on. The latest angle is a promised congressional investigation. Some congressmen were forced to pay as high as $40 to scalpers to make good promises they had made to friends to provide ducats for the service classic. This peeved the lawmakers to such an extent that they now threaten to have a special congressional committee appointed to see why their franking privilege does not include box seats at the game. All of which provides much good press agent ballyhoo for a game which does not need it.

NOW they accuse Gene Tunney of "biting the hand that fed him". Billy Gibson, who brought the present heavyweight champion from mediocrity and "made him what he is today," is said to be peeved at the champion picking Dudley Field Malone as legal representative of the firm. Gibson is of the opinion that he is all the representative Gene needs. He also claims to know nothing of the arrangements Gene is said to have made to fight for Humbert Fugazy at the Polo Grounds next summer.

In the meantime, Gibson is going ahead with plans to add a couple more world champions to his stable. He is pointing Kid Kaplan toward the lightweight throne and should he be able to get Sammy Mandel in the ring that ambition should be easily realized.

Another potential champion under Gibson's wing is Carl Duane of New York who lost to Tod Morgan of Seattle, juior lightweight champion, last night in New York.

THE breakup of the "Big Three" apparently has not lessened the interest in the game between Harvard and Yale. The New Haven railroad announces that 92 special trains will be run from Boston and New York this afternoon to take care of the crowds. From New York the railroad is planning to run 28 specials, with 220 coaches.

AN evidence of the evening influence of sports is carried in the story from Paris of the enthusiastic receptions accorded five German boxers at the resumption of international boxing matches in Paris. The story has it that each of the five Germans received an ovation on entering the ring. In the five fights between French and Germans, only one German was victorious, Doemgoergen, a German middleweight, defeating Romerio, the best France had to offer at 160 pounds.

Playing Field at Urbana is in Perfect Condition for Big Ten Encounter

Fifty-Five Thousand Fans To See Second Battle Between Minnesota and Michigan; Case Takes on Reserve and Yale Is Favorite Over Harvard

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 20—Ohio State and Illinois wind up the Big Ten Conference football season here today in one of the outstanding games of conference play. Optimistic to the extreme, the Illini are hopeful of victory in this traditional battle and a triple tie for the Big Ten championship in the event of defeats for Michigan and Northwestern in other afternoon headliners.

The playing field will be in perfect condition for the Buckeye trio of roughriders—Karow, Marek and Grimm—the recent heavy snowfall having been kept from the turf by the large tarpaulin.

55,000 Fans to See Game

Minneapolis, Nov. 20—Fifty-five thousand fans were up and going with the sun today as Minneapolis made its final preparations for the afternoon's holiday occasioned by the second meeting of the season between Dr. Spears' Minnesota Gophers and the University of Michigan.

Fortified by the brilliant Benny Friedman aerial offensive, Michigan adjusted itself for the storm promised by the gopher cohorts, admittedly stronger than when humbled by the Wolverines earlier in the season and whetted its title appetite for the Big Ten title.

In the last two meetings between the two schools, the Wolverines have subjected the Gophers to unmerciful defeats. The growing strength of Spears' offensive, however, has given the Norsemen an even break with Michigan in today's betting.

Nebraska vs. New York

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 20—Eastern football, exemplified by Chick Meehan's undefeated New York University aggregation, and the western brand represented by the Nebraska Cornhuskers, stepped out on a frozen field here this afternoon to joust for intersectional honors.

The weather was biting cold and the rain soaked turf was frozen hard as pavement from a frost fringed gale which was scudding out of the north.

Coach Meehan was pitting a team which had compiled eight successive victories in the Atlantic region against a cornhusker horde which had won five of six contests in its own conference. Twenty thousand spectators, garbed in winter clothing, were in the stands.

Case Plays Reserve

Cleveland, Nov. 20—A field made soggy by intermittent snowstorms during the last 48 hours has caused a reversal in predictions of the outcome of the annual football game here today between Case and Western Reserve. The former had been held in high esteem by the dopesters due to its ability to pass and kick, but a slow field had dissipated this advantage, most experts placing the squads on even terms, although a few favor the Reserves.

While neither team has much to gain so far as conference standing is concerned, each will battle stubbornly to defend its honor and traditional prestige in this thirty-fourth annual contest.

Yale is Favorite

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20—Like an old actor who has been cast for pie throwing but lives in the day when he played Hamlet, the Yale-Harvard football game will make its annual bid this afternoon for the fame which athletic decay must deny it.

The time was not so long ago when this game was the ultimate in consequence, usually deciding the disposition of all collegiate honors. But today it had only tradition to lean upon and what with the succession of defeats experienced by the principals this season, tradition seemed a sickly reed.

No Harvard-Yale game ever has meant less to the final ranking of college teams. In other and better years, at least one of the contenders, sometimes both, came up to the meeting with presentable records. This time, they are a pair of odd lots, marked down from $1.98.

Yale has been made a general favorite at short odds, the Blue being conceded to have a faster, more aggressive line and offense and the shiftier backfield.

TWO TILTS SET BY SOUTHERN TEAMS

Leading Outfits Resting for Thanksgiving Battles

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 20—Leading teams of the Southern Conference rested today in preparation for annual Thanksgiving Day games.

Only two games were on the schedule, chief among which was the Maryland-Washington and Lee game at Lexington, Va.

Another conference gamew as that between North Carolina State and South Carolina at Columbia.

In Atlanta, Mercer will contest with Oglethorpe for S. I. A. A. honors, while in South Carolina, Furman and Citadel oppose each other for the state title honors.

Hampden Sidney Tigers are conceded a chance to beat Florida in their annual game in Tampa today.

COACH COMPTON TO TAKE CHARGE MONDAY NIGHT

Ten Additional Cage Men Expected To Report

Coach "Baldy" Compton will take charge of the Harding High basketball candidates Monday night, following the final football game being played this afternoon.

Coach Compton called the first practice session for the Harding High cage candidates last Monday and handled the duties of coaching 35 youths who responded to the call to Dewey Bohyer former all-Ohio forward. Coach Compton assisted Coach Sprout in preparing the Marion gridders for their final tilt with Shelby.

At least ten additional candidates are expected to report Monday or Tuesday night, since the close of the football season. Among those who will probably be seen on the court Monday will be Joe Rinnert and Orville Garrett, two of the three letter men of last year. Both men are playing on the football team today.

Practice in Gym

Practice will be conducted on the Harding High gym floor until after Thanksgiving when the Star Auditorium floor will probably be employed by the coach. A cut in the squad is expected before practice session gets under way on the latter court.

Harding High will meet the faculty in the opener of the season Dec. 17, in the Star Auditorium. Several other games have been scheduled and the complete menu for 1926-27 will be announced next week.

No out-of-town games will be played before January.

MIDWAY TO PLAY HOWITZER FIVE

Game Scheduled for Armory After Drill Monday

The Midway Lunches and Howitzer Company cage teams will swing into action on the armory floor, Monday night, following Howitzer drill.

It will be the first appearance of the Howitzer Company quintet this year and is booked as a practice game. The Midways have been practicing regularly and are all set for their first home game with the Boyd Furnitures of LaRue, to be staged next Wednesday night as a preliminary to the K. of C.-Isaly championship battle.

It is possible that Howitzer and Company D, O. N. G., may organize teams and meet other independent quintets in this district during the season but no definite plans have been made as yet.

ST. XAVIER'S MUSKATEERS PRIME FOR ANOTHER WIN

Cincinnati, Nov. 20—Primed to add another victory to their record of winning eight successive games, St. Xavier's Muskateers today planned to use a diversified air attack against West Virginia Wesleyan at their homecoming day gridiron fete here this afternoon.

With the possible exception of the Quantico Marines, West Virginia aggregation will undoubtedly be the strongest team faced by the local college outfit this season. Coach Joe Meyers was expected to rely upon Paul Beatty, Middletown triple threat man, to do most of the passing for the Muskateers.

ASHLAND COLLEGE WINS OVER DUQUESNE, 14 TO 10

Ashland college moleskin warriors defeated Duquesne university of Pittsburg, Pa., yesterday, by a score of 14 to 10. Duquesne scored the first touchdown of the contest, but were soon overtaken by the Ohio boys. Lonero and Buzzard were responsible for the Ashland touchdowns.

COSHOCTON GRIDDERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Awarded Central Ohio Conference Cup After Defeating Mt. Vernon

Coshocton, O., Nov. 20—Coshocton High football team won the 1927 Central Ohio Conference cup here yesterday afternoon, defeating Mount Vernon, 19 to 0.

Coshocton scored its first touchdown on a blocked punt behind the goal line. The second touchdown came when Parrish of Coshocton, after a series of plunges and a seventeen-yard pass, broke over the line.

Parrish gained further glory for himself when he took the ball on his own thirty-yard line and dodged through the entire Mount Vernon team seventy yards and a touchdown.

LORAIN LIONS CANCEL TWO HOME CONTESTS

Lorain Lions basketball team has cancelled two games scheduled on their home floor during the next week, because of the small attendance at three recent frames, the manager of the team announced today.

The Lions, who defeated Isaly Dairies a week ago, are Lorain's entry in the Central Pro league, will meet the Brooklyn club of the American league, Nov. 28, in their next home attraction.

MORGAN WINS IN BOUT WITH DUANE IN GOTHAM ARENA

Retains Crown as Junior Lightweight Champion

New York, Nov. 20—As was generally forecast, Tod Morgan came down from Seattle to the Bronx last night with a majority that Carl Duane could not overcome, even though he packed the fistic convention at Madison Square Garden with Bronx voters and captured most of the Manhattan delegation.

Tod was thus elected to succeed himself as junior lightweight champion by the ballots of Referee Louis Magnolia and Judges Harold Barnes and George Kelby.

Morgan employing a left jab as his chief defense weapon and a right cross to the head with occasional variations of left hooks and rights to the body, carried thirteen of the fifteen rounds. Duane took two and three of those he lost were fairly even, although Morgan undeniably had the shade.

There was nothing approaching a knockdown even when the two gamecocks mixed it furiously in the closing rounds.

BUICKS TO MEET TIFFIN TONIGHT

Marion Team To Bowl Visitors at Y. M. C. A.

Marion Buicks will meet the crack bowling team of Tiffin tonight on the Y. M. C. A. alleys.

The Buicks have been scheduling many outside games during the season and have been more or less successful in their attempts to score victories over independent opponents.

In three tight matches, two at Kenton and one here, the Buicks lost a series of three to the New York Central outfit of Kenton a few weeks ago. Kenton took the first match on their home floor, Marion won the second here, and the third went to Kenton on the Hardin County alleys. Marion Buicks have also met Delaware on several occasions this season.

The match with Tiffin tonight will be the first contest with that team this year and promises to feature three close games.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

New York—Tod Morgan, of Seattle, retained junior lightweight title by winning decision over Carl Duane, of New York, 15 rounds. Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, knocked out Arnold Ryan, of Brooklyn, in the sixth round. Les Murray, of Australia, won decision over Solly Seaman, of New York, 10 rounds.

Tampa, Fla.—Willie Herman, of New York, won decision over Red Cap Wilson, also New York, 10 rounds.

Postoffice Bowlers Take Three from Stars and Tie Displaymen for Third Rung

Y-Indus Wins Two Out of Three Games from Marion County Lumbers by Slight Margins; Steam Shovels and Logan Gas Tied for First Place

Postoffice bowlers slid into a tie for third place with Displaymen last night when they defeated the Stars in three tight games in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial League bowling matches. Y-Indus advanced a notch when they took two out of three from the Marion County Lumber Co. crew.

The Stars lost the first game by a 21-point margin and dropped the third contest by the slight margin of nine points. The second game went to the Postoffice with a score of 720 to 615.

Y-Indus and Marion County Lumber also featured a couple of close games last night when the Y-Indus team took the first two contests by slight margins and met overwhelming defeat in the final game.

Thomas Stars

Thomas of the Stars carried the highest total number of points for the match last night when he was credited with 425 in the three games. Scott rolled 173 in the final game after making only 90 points in the second tilt. Cookston was the outstanding bowler of the Postoffice force, counting up a total of 567 points and rolling 200 in one frame.

Biddle was high man for the Y-Indus in the match total with 471, while Slagle held the single game record with 182 pins. Dorward starred on the Marion County Lumber team with 488 points as a total and 189 for a single game.

Steam Shovels and Logan Gas remain in a tie for first place in the Industrial League as a result of the seventh round played this week. Hubers retain their hold on second place while Displaymen and Postoffice are tied for third position.

The Stars dropped a notch after suffering three defeats last night. They are tied with Anthonys for fourth place with the C., D. & M. crew on their heels. Y-Indus follows the C., D. & M. with the Pennsy and Hocking Valley coming next. The American Express and Marion County Lumber are still tied for the cellar position each having won two games out of played.

FORDHAM, GEORGETOWN MEET FOR ANNUAL BATTLE

New York, Nov. 20—With its full strength available for the first time this season, a fighting Fordham team met a more powerful Georgetown eleven here today in the fourteenth annual game of their series.

As Georgetown has one of the hardest charging lines in the East, the Maroon planned to make extensive use of the forward pass. Fordham's aerial attack centered around Delaney, an expert tosser. Georgetown, with a great line and a fair backfield, was a strong favorite.

ROSENBLUMS OPEN SEASON

Cleveland's world champion basketball team will get its first test of the 1926-27 campaign at Rochester, N. Y., tonight in an American League game. With two weeks of strenuous work behind them, the Rosenblum's are reported by their coach and captain, Marty Friedman, to be in good physical condition for the opening tussle. They expect plenty of opposition from the Rochester five.

A Story of Boyhood Adventures

BY JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

winter weather when I let an out of the window by the teeth, and the wind was it was Saturday.

was all in the barn except of Tripe before I got done we all talked about him to think up some way to get but I do not think a fella's as good in the winter as in time. We could not think to get him. I wish I was a would go over and pick up his crack it like it was a nut and like I was picking a worm apple. Finely I told them all and get their shovels and when I et breakfast, and they went over and went in the of Tripe's yard and started snow off their paths, and his her nose out of the door me what we were doing, and were all going around shovel- for each other, so she put on and came out grinning like a because she was getting some- nothing, and she told the Lost Tripe, whose name is Hennery his shovel and help the little boys, and when he said he didn't want to she said he ought to be ashamed and to not let her tell him again.

She was standing on the next to the top step with her hands rolled up in her shawl, and he came sneaking out with the shovel, but Nibs was in too much of a hurry and made a jump for him too soon and he turned around and made a jump to get inside, but his mother had moved over and he hit her so hard she sot down on the porch and he clumb all over her getting into the house and he was hollering "Mama!" at every jump. I never saw a woman so mad. She jumped up and got in the house almost as soon as he did.

I don't know what she done to him but he kept hollering for about five minutes. We waited till he didn't holler, and then we went down to the hill and had a good time all day and Youniss and Hattie and Maggie and Feebie came down and brang a pail of hot dogs. Youniss has got an idee that a fella always wants to be eating. And he does too. She said she was sorry she busted my slay, and I told her I was glad my slay didn't bust her. A fella can fix a slay.

Tomorrow is Sunday and I have got to have my face and neck and ears washed, darn it.

Daily Bedtime Story

BY HOWARD GARIS

Uncle Wiggily and His Friends

"There is no use," said the Woozie Wolf to the Fuzzy Fox, "trying to catch that Uncle Wiggily rabbit by day."

"I believe you are right," agreed the Fox. "I tried the trick of catching him when he was getting his shoes shined, but it didn't work."

"The sun was too bright," went on the Wolf. "But I have another idea, Fox."

"What is it?" asked the Fox, as he ran his red tongue over his white teeth to see if there was anything on them to eat. But there was not a crumb. "What is your idea, Mr. Wolf, if I may be so bold as to ask you kindly to tell me?" Oh, the Fox could be very polite when he wished.

"My plan is this," growled the Wolf. "We shall go boldly up to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow some evening, ring the bell, walk in and bring him out to nibble him."

"But if we go there in the evening before the little rabbit children are in bed," objected the Fox, "they will see us and they will scream and cry and the Police Dog will come."

"That's just it!" said the Wolf with a smile. "The reason I think it will be best for us to go in the evening is that all the rabbits will be awake. They will be playing games, singing and laughing for there is no more work to do Saturday night. The Police Dog is used to hearing loud noises of the rabbit children in the hollow stump bungalow on Saturday night. If there are a few more yells, when we take Uncle Wiggily away, that will not matter. The Police Dog will only smile and say it is Uncle Wiggily's bunnies playing."

"Perhaps you are right," said the Fox.

"I know I am right," declared the Wolf. "Come on. It will soon be evening and we'll have the rabbit for a late supper."

When the two bad chaps reached the hollow stump bungalow they could hear the merry shouts and daughter of the rabbit children. Oh, such a jolly racket as there was.

"What did I tell you?" whispered the Wolf. "A few yells, more or less, will make no difference. Come on now, we'll boldly ring the bell and go in to get Uncle Wiggily."

"He is playing a pillow game with the little bunnies," softly said the Fox looking in a window. "Jingle and Jangle and the other rabbit children are throwing pillows and cushions at their father and he is tossing cushions back at them. Hear them yell!"

"The more they yell now the less they will yell when we carry off their father," said the Wolf. "Come along."

Boldly the two bad chaps walked up the steps and rang the bell. Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy answered, and when she opened the door the Fox and Wolf impolitely and rudely pushed right past her.

"Where are you going and what do you want?" asked the muskrat lady.

"We are going to get Uncle Wiggily!" snarled the Wolf, and then he pushed open the door where Uncle Wiggily was having a pillow and cushion fight with the rabbits.

"Oh, Daddicums! Look!" yelled Jingle and Jangle and Tumble and Bumble and all the others. "The bad chaps are here."

"Oh, are they?" asked Uncle Wiggily, showing not the least sign of fear. "Well, they don't belong here. You must go right out!" he said to the Fox and Wolf.

"What if we won't go?" asked the Wolf, sneering like.

"Then I'll throw my chair cushion at you!" said Uncle Wiggily, picking it up off the floor.

"Pooh! Who is afraid of a soft cushion?" laughed the Fox. "Throw away as much as you like!"

"I'll not throw a soft cushion at you—I'll throw a lumpy one," exclaimed the rabbit. With that he hurled his cushion, and it struck the Fox and the Wolf on the head with such a hard bang that they saw stars and a moon and part of the sun and they thought it was going to rain; so out of the bungalow they ran, a bit dizzy like, but not taking Uncle Wiggily with them.

He hurled his cushion.

"Oh, Daddicums, what made your soft cushion so hard and lumpy, like all of a sudden?" asked Jingle.

"Because, my dear," answered her father, "I put a flat iron inside through a little hole I ripped as soon as I saw the bad chaps. It was a hard flatiron that made my cushion lumpy!"

"Oh, what a good joke!" laughed the little bunnies. But the Fox and Wolf didn't think so. Anyhow that's what happened, and if the slice of toast doesn't slip on the lump of butter and slide into the sugar bowl, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's pumpkin pie.

The largest income enjoyed by any person in Japan belongs to a woman—Yene Suzuki. She is an elderly widow and possesses an income of $4,000,000 a year.

Stocks Recover in Short Session from Drops at Friday Close

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Railroad stocks steady; industrial stocks firm; domestic bonds inactive; foreign bonds steady; grain steady; copper steady; oil firm; cotton steady; rubber steady; sugar strong; pig iron steady; foreign exchange steady.

New York, Nov. 20—Moderate recoveries took place in the short session today, in many of the industrial stocks which bore the brunt of Friday's closing short selling.

Another 4 point jump in Baldwin Locomotive, in the short movement which has added approximately 30 points to the market value of the stock in 2 1-2 weeks was the outstanding feature of the industrial list. Heavy trading in the stock took place around 146, the highest price of the year to date.

The sharp advance in Mack Trucks to above 96 was accompanied by reports of better business and higher operations and profits for the company. [illegible] Motors was well bought at 45 and fractionally above, while Chrysler and Willys Overland lost ground. The rubber and tire stocks showed the effects of the moderate price cutting which has been put into effect this week and which is expected to go further. Meanwhile, the outlook for the rubber and tire industry was reported as excellent by the leaders in the industry today.

Rail Market Dull

With the exception of the St. Paul issues, the railroad stocks were unusually dull and quiet. St. Paul common and preferred stocks sold higher on the prospects of favorable treatment for the stockholders under the new management, which is expected to take the road out of receivership.

The oil stocks were steady, with Standard of New Jersey making a fractional recovery and leading independents like Marland and Phillips selling slightly higher.

Woolworth staged a sharp recovery to 192, up five points, as a tribute to the excellent mercantile reports from the southern states. U. S. Steel was in demand above 145.

MILLERSBURG VICTOR OVER MT. GILEAD HIGH

Game Ending 7-0 Played in Sea of Snow and Mud

Mt. Gilead, Nov. 20—Mt. Gilead High school dropped into the .500 per cent column in football yesterday afternoon, when the team lost at Millersburg by a 7 to 0 score. The game was played in a sea of snow and mud, which combined with the cold weather, made poor playing abundant on both sides.

The locals put up a poor brand of football during the first half when Millersburg scored their only touchdown. They scored through the center of the line, following a triple pass trick play.

At the opening of the second half the Purple awoke to the realization that they were in a football game, and had the edge on the home team throughout the last two periods. In the last quarter, Millersburg had the ball on the one-yard line with first down. The local line held and Millersburg lost the ball within about six inches of a touchdown. This was the outstanding spot of the game, and a brilliant piece of defensive work.

Since the ball was under the goal posts, it was impossible to punt. Jim Thompson took the ball through center for sixty yards and on a dry field would have scored. However, he shifted to avoid the quarterback, and slipped and was tackled from behind.

Once more the locals lost an opportunity to score, when within the ten-yard line, they passed, only to have the pass intercepted.

Offensively, the teams were about equal, each team making seven first downs. Mt. Gilead, completed six passes, had two intercepted and four were incomplete. Millersburg attempted two passes, both of which were incomplete.

I. T. HICKMAN & SON TO ENTER CHICAGO EXHBIT

Local Stockmen To Take Carload of Chester White Hogs to Show

I. T. Hickman & Son, proprietors of the White City Farm, Route 3, Marion, will leave next Wednesday for the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago, taking with them a car load of Chester White hogs. The exposition is to be held from Nov. 27 to Dec. 4.

The local men have won the prize for grand champion boar the last three years and have taken many other prizes. Chester Whites usually outnumber all other breeds at the show and the winner of grand champion is indeed a real victor.

With the closing of the entry books for the individual live stock classes of the International Live Stock Show, Secretary-Manager B. H. Heide announces that the greatest array of cattle, horses, sheep, and hogs ever brought together to take part in the contests of the exposition.

Cattle lead in the individual classes, furnishing 1,959 head out of a total of 4,845 entries, with sheep ranking next with 1,275, swine 1,163, and horses 448. This is an increase of about 530 over last year's total.

Chester Whites top the swin breeds with 248 entries, followed by Berkshires with 192. Herefords lead in the cattle division. Shropshires head the list among the sheep, and Percherons rank among the horses.

Among the many interesting entries is the world's champion litter of 17 hogs which weighed 5,117 pounds at six months of age.

$160,000,000 SUBWAY FOR LONDON TO START

London, Nov. 20—The $160,000,000 Anglo-American project to construct a vast new network of underground railroads for London goods traffic is understood to be making steady progress.

"We are now at work on the plans and details," said C. Carkett-James, chief engineer of the scheme, to the International News Service. "The preparation of the scheme is a gigantic task and we do not yet know when work on the undertaking will start. The plan will undoubtedly mature, however."

It is proposed to build sixty-nine miles of electric railroad track, equipped with gigantic elevators for raising trucks to the surface.

INFIDEL BOOKS PARALYZE FAITH, EVANGELIST SAYS

Rev. W. R. Cain, Wichita, Kas., Speaks at First Nazarene Church

"The Keeping Power of God" was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. W. R. Cain of Wichita, Kas., who is conducting revival services at the Nazarene Church at the service last night. His text was taken from First Peter 1:5, "Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

"The keeping power of God is referred to 517 times in the Bible," Rev. Cain said. "Christians need to be preserved by the keeping power of God; if we read infidel books it will paralyze our faith in God. When we are converted, we are engaged to Jesus Christ and when we are sanctified we are married to Him and God can keep us from sin in a wicked world," he continued.

"God has the power of keeping all from sin who place their trust in him; those who are sinless. To sin is to loose our soul," he concluded, "the neglecting of prayer and study of the Bible will hinder God from keeping us."

His vocal solo for the service was "Sunshine in Canaan," which he sang while playing his own accompaniment on the guitar. Evangelistic services will be held at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning and at 7:30 o'clock tonight and tomorrow night, continuing so throughout next week.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S NIGHT OBSERVED AT TRINITY

Dr. C. M. Eddy, of Granville, Secretary of Denison University, Speaks

"Young People's Fellowship Night" was observed at Trinity Baptist church last night concluding the "Good Fellowship Week" program with an address on "The Opportunities of Youth Today for Service Tomorrow" by Dr. C. M. Eddy of Granville, secretary of Denison University.

Dr. Eddy gave illustrations from the lives of men of achievement, showing how they met opportunities in the face of opposition and [illegible] the younger generation [illegible] of tomorrow [illegible].

The Sunday School orchestra played several numbers, a [illegible] singing followed and a social hour during which time refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Anna May Jones.

Rev. U. S. Davis, pastor of the church, will be in charge of special Thanksgiving services and services in connection with the "Good Fellowship Week" observed by the church, Sunday. He will speak on the subject "The Things We Are Thankful For." Special Thanksgiving music is being arranged by the choir.
